21 Injured as Fire Destroys Rooming House In Milwaukee Half Dozen Persons Seriously Hurt In Tragedy JUMP INTO NETS

Victims Burned or Injured While Leaping To Safety

Milwaukee — (P) — Twenty-one persons were injured, six seriously, early today in a fire which swept through an old brick and frame mansion on W. Wisconsin avenue which had been converted into an apartment and rooming house.

At County Emergency hospital, eight blocks from the scene of the fire, attendants said some of the injured had received severe burns and others had been hurt in jumping onto an ice-covered lawn before the arrival of firemen. Among the less seriously injured were two firemen.

Most of the seriously injured had quarters on the top floor of the three-story building, police and firemen said. Among them was a four-year-old girl.

Firemen said the blaze, which broke out about 5 o'clock a. m., started among rubbish in the basement.

Family Escapes

Eight residents of the building were saved by jumping into fire life nets. Among them was a family of three. The father, firemen said, held his wife and small son near the window of the third-floor apartment until the arrival of fire fighting equipment. Then, when the life net was spread, he pushed his wife from the window, and she landed safely. A second later, the father leaped with his son in his arms.

The blaze had gained such headway by the time it was discovered, apparently by a passerby, that flight down the main stairway was impossible. A few of the 41 tenants escaped down a rear stair leading to the second floor.

Firemen found flames roaring on all floors. Many occupants lay on the icy ground, too badly hurt to crawl away. Others huddled in upper floor windows and balconies. The firemen reached some with extension ladders. The others leaped into safety nets.

Charles Bauch, operator of the establishment, said the building contained 35 rooms. The loss was estimated at between $12,000 and $15,000.

Mrs. Mary Trotter, 44, was reported in poor condition. She suffered burns about the neck, arms and chest.

Also in poor condition was Mrs. Irma Melzak, 37, whose right hip and pelvis were fractured. In addition, she suffered from smoke inhalation and exposure.

Others seriously injured were: Miss Corinne Greenwood, 27, fractures of the spine and both ankles; George Douglas, 64, railroad conductor, fracture of the right ankle, possible fractures of both heels, fractured spine and bruises.

Mr. George Douglas, 55, fracture of the right ankle, possible fractures of both heels, fractured spine and bruises.

Mrs. Alvin Dietrich, 22, cuts, bruises and smoke inhalation. Dietrich, Mrs. Ruth Pietkiewicz, 25, and Marilyn Pietkiewicz, 4, were taken to the hospital, suffering from smoke inhalation.

Refugee Plan May Clear Path for Envoy's Return

If U. S. Approves Proposals Wilson May Go Back to Germany

London — (P) — The intergovernmental committee on refugees today authorized the establishment of a private international corporation to finance a five-year $300,000,000 plan for the emigration of Jews from Germany.

The refugee committee disclosed it would try to move 150,000 young Jews from Germany in the first year of the plan's operation.

The new corporation will be formed as soon as possible to lend financial help to this undertaking.

At conclusion of a two-day meeting the committee instructed Sir Herbert Emerson, its new director, to advise the German government that it would continue to devote its best efforts to aiding "involuntary German refugees."

Sir Herbert replaced George Rublee, the American director who resigned yesterday after laying before the committee the German terms for Jewish emigration.

Washington — (P) — Possible return of Ambassador Hugh Wilson to Berlin was seen by some officials today if the United States government should approve an arrangement with the reich for the emigration of German Jews.

The arrangement, announced in London this week, was worked out by George Rublee, American, who has resigned as director of the intergovernmental committee for refugees.

Ambassador Wilson was called back in November for report and consultation following the outbreak of an anti-Semitic campaign in Germany.

It was said reliably today, however, that there was nothing imminent in his return. Study must be given to the German promises and to the manner in which they are carried out.

Asked yesterday whether Wilson could now go back to Berlin, Secretary Hull said he knew nothing on this point.

Hull said the arrangement reached by Rublee with German authorities was a substantial recognition of the need for orderly emigration of the refugees from Germany in place of present chaotic conditions of exodus.

Bill to Abolish New Commerce Body Advanced

Catlin Measure Engrossed In Assembly by Voice Vote

AMENDMENT FAILS

Balzer Proposes Tax on Cigarets for Old Age Pensions

Madison — (P) — The Catlin bill abolishing the LaFollette created department of commerce was pushed a step closer to final passage today as the assembly engrossed it by a voice vote.

The assembly voted down an amendment allowing the department to function to July 1, and a motion to shelve the bill. Both were offered by Paul R. Alfonsi (P), Pence. Last week the senate passed the Brown bill dissolving the department.

Mark S. Catlin (R), Appleton, author of the assembly measure, claimed the division was "attempting to spend $60,000 to show that Wisconsin is no place for industry."

He referred to a comparative tax study the department is now making. Alfonsi had suggested the department be continued until the study is finished. He said the information may prove to be of "great value" to the state.

Proposes Cigaret Tax Assemblyman Arthur J. Balzer (D), West Allis, introduced a bill calling for a 2 cent tax on every package of cigarettes to supply revenue for old age pensions. The bill, which also taxes cigarette papers, would raise $1,500,000 a year, Balzer said. The retailer is responsible for payment of the tax.

A bill allowing counties to hold referendums to determine whether liquor would be sold within their boundaries was submitted by Glenn H. James (R), Montfort. Cities, villages and towns already have this right.

Balzer also introduced a bill placing taxicabs under the jurisdiction of the public service commission and requiring them to carry public liability insurance.

Heil Says Class Hatreds Must End

Governor Finds People 'Tired of Centralization of Authority'

New York — (P) — Governor Julius E. Hall of Wisconsin told the audience at the G.O.P. Lincoln dinner last night that people in his part of the country are "tired of centralization of authority in far-away places."

He called it a "centralization of authority that leads to such things as 'reciprocal trade agreements' that mean our throats are cut by foreign competition."

"The people of Wisconsin," the governor added, "want to sell their cheese and milk and pork and other farm products. That is the road to agricultural recovery."

"Preaching of the strife of divisions of class hatreds—the setting of one part of our people here in America against the other—must stop," he continued.

"Industry must not be set against labor and labor must not be set against industry. The farmer must not be set against the city man. City people must not be divided one against the other."

Governor Heil said he had "no quarrel" with WPA for "the good workers of this nation have the right to look to their government for help in time of stress and distress beyond their power to cope with."

"My quarrel," he added, "is with a government that bases its whole being on relief. My quarrel is with an administration that is based on relief—on joblessness, on unemployment as a permanent thing—instead of bending every effort to put these good men and women back to work."

Harmony Goal Of Democrats At Conference

Told There's Not Enough Cooperation Between Solons, White House

CLOSED MEETING

Legislators Want Roosevelt to Take Members Into Confidence

Washington — (P) — House Democrats heard complaints at a party conference today that there was not enough cooperation between the White House and Democratic legislators.

Several members who attended the closed meeting in the house chamber asserted that Congressman Cox (D-Ga.) had made a rousing speech the tenor of which was that the administration would do well to go along with congress and not insist so much that congress go along with it.

While the conference, held in an atmosphere of cigar smoke and general good fellowship, was described by Democratic leaders as entirely harmonious, a number of those present said Cox had spoken of a lack of consultation between the White House and Democratic legislators.

They said the Georgian, who has opposed some administration measures, had suggested that if Mr. Roosevelt took members into his confidence more, he would obtain greater cooperation from congress.

Raps Special Message Congressman Randolph (D-W. Va.), other Democrats said, spoke along the same line as Cox, protesting Mr. Roosevelt's action in sending another special message on relief to congress after it had made a $150,000,000 reduction in the amount the president had asked for WPA.

Administration leaders in the house were said to have urged harmony and better attendance at the house sessions. Majority Leader Rayburn of Texas said he thought the meeting would result in a larger turnout of party adherents at the daily sessions and particularly when important votes are scheduled.

It was the failure of Democrats to turn out last week when the house passed down an appropriation for the Tennessee Valley Authority that led to the meeting today. Republicans have been showing up in force at the daily house sessions.

The party meeting preceded by a few minutes a session of the house at which an important phase of the president's national defense program was the scheduled business.

As the house debated the measure to provide both personnel and equipment increases for the army, Democratic leaders predicted the chamber would approve it without alteration, despite Republican efforts to spread airplane purchases over the next three years.

Japs Occupying Chinese Island

Naval and Aviation Units Take Possession of Yulinkan

Hong Kong — (P) — Japanese naval and aviation units landed today at Yulinkan, at the southernmost tip of Hainan, the Chinese island near British and French empire lifelines, whose preliminary occupation Friday brought French and British diplomatic inquiries about Japanese intentions.

(The United States destroyer John D. Edwards, with Captain John T. G. Stapler, commander of the United States navy's South China patrol, aboard, arrived from Hong Kong today at Hainan, North Hainan port, to investigate and, if necessary, to protect American lives and interests on Hainan.)

The landing placed the Japanese navy in a potential base 750 miles due west of Luzon, the principal island of the Philippines.

An official statement said that by noon Japanese landing forces had penetrated 15 miles inland with a rapidity that indicated an apparent lack of Chinese resistance to the invaders' occupation of the Sama bay area—generally considered among the Far East's potentially best although currently undeveloped deep water harbors.

(Hainan is about 200 miles from the Indo-China coast and 300 miles from Hong Kong, a British crown colony. In Tokyo Foreign Minister Hiroshi Arata assured the British and French ambassadors that the occupation of Hainan would not exceed military necessity and was done only to curb Chinese shipping. He said Japan probably would hold Hainan until the end of the war.)

FDIC to Pay Claims Totaling 23 Million Jersey City, N. J. — (P) — The New Jersey Title Guaranty and Trust company failed to open today and the federal deposit insurance corporation announced it would pay claims of approximately $23,000,000, the largest pay-off of insured deposits it ever has made.

Want Westerner As Successor to Justice Brandeis

Spanish Loyalists Prepare for Drive On Central Front

Insurgents Expected to Push Offensive in Effort to End War

Perpignan, France — (P) — The Spanish government braced its central front today to meet the shock of any insurgent offensive expected soon in an effort to clinch victory in the civil war.

Government dispatches said Premier Juan Negrin and several members of his cabinet were visiting Jarama and Guadalajara to bolster the defenses in those sectors.

Political parties and labor unions of the people's front were being consulted by other ministers on measures to bring the central army's force to top form.

All sectors were reported quiet as the insurgents shifted their strength from the northern front to the central zone.

The heavy odds against successful government resistance in the central zone were reflected by an insurgent announcement showing the division of territory since their conquest of Catalonia.

The insurgent zone was estimated at 148,000 square miles with a population of 16,500,000 compared to the government region of 47,000 square miles with 5,500,000 inhabitants.

In northern Spain, a handful of government machine-guns manned in the snow-covered Pyrenees near Prats de Molle with a dynamite squad to protect the last units of government forces plodding across the border to French concentration camps.

At intervals, thunderous roars echoed through the gorges as the dynamiters blew up piles of abandoned war supplies.

Push Investigation In Extortion Plot

Prisoners Admit They Have No Information On Liggett Murder

St. Paul — (P) — St. Paul police studied further today the case of two alleged writers of a $15,000 extortion letter to Charles A. Ward, millionaire manufacturer and political figure here.

Arraignment of the two men, originally planned for today, might be postponed pending further investigation by police, M. F. Kinkead, Ramsey county attorney, said.

Police Chief Clinton Hackert said the two prisoners, Matthew W. Stegbauer, 31, former convict, and Harold McAvoy, 29, former law student turned whisky salesman, both of St. Paul, gave police a complete confession yesterday.

The letter, demanding $15,000 from Ward, intimated that the writers would attempt to connect him with the unsolved murder several years ago of Walter Liggett, Minneapolis editor, unless he gave them the money.

Assistant Chief of Police Charles J. Tierney, personally conducting the investigation, said Stegbauer admitted the pair had no information whatever to connect Ward with the Liggett case.

Ward received the letter Friday directing him to leave the money in a St. Paul safe. The trap was set and when Paul Contreras, 40, Mexican taxi hauler, who was paid a dime as an innocent messenger, picked up the dummy package of money, he was followed and arrested with Stegbauer. McAvoy was arrested as he hurried from the scene. Stegbauer was released from Leavenworth six months ago after serving a sentence for hi-jacking.

Branigan Denies Eight Counts of Criminal Slander

Returns to Rock County Jail After Bond Is Fixed at $1,000

Janesville — (P) — E. R. Branigan, Beloit fuel dealer, pleaded innocent when arraigned in circuit court yesterday on eight counts of criminal slander.

After his bond was fixed at $1,000, he was returned to the Rock county jail, where he will complete June 15 a nine-month term for criminal libel.

John H. Louis, Janesville, who is scheduled to be released next month after serving a six-month term for criminal libel, pleaded innocent to seven new libel counts. His bond also was fixed at $1,000 and he was returned to his cell.

Judge S. E. Smalley, Cuba City, took under advisement the case of the Beloit Daily News, which entered through counsel a plea of innocent to a charge of publishing an obscene pamphlet, and waived a jury trial.

George Garrigan, Beloit, counsel for the newspaper, submitted a stipulation of facts. In oral argument he declared the newspaper had nothing to do with editing or distribution of the pamphlet, printed in its job department, and voluntarily canceled the contract under which it had done the printing.

Garrigan said the newspaper for 50 years had been fighting for community uplift, and charged that enemies of the publication had been "laying" for it.

Special Prosecutor Lynn Smith, Jefferson, submitted a brief. The charges against Branigan, Louis and the Beloit newspaper were returned by a special Rock county grand jury last year.

Injured Youth Awarded $60,000 in Damage Suit

Milwaukee — (P) — A circuit court jury today awarded Raymond Dahl, Jr., $180,000 damages in his suit against the Charles A. Kruse Milling company, in whose plant he was severely burned two years ago. He had asked $125,000.

Dahl was injured in an explosion which let go as he walked into the corn mill to visit his father, traffic manager for the company, who was among the nine persons killed.

The jury held that Dahl had the defendant's consent to enter the mill and that the company failed to use methods reasonably adequate to make the place free from danger.

Counsel for the company said he would argue Feb. 24 before Judge Otto Brodenbach to have the verdict set aside on the ground it did not conform with the evidence. The award, it was understood, was one of the largest ever made in a Wisconsin personal injury case.

82-Year-Old Jurist Quits After 23 Years on Bench

NOTED LIBERAL

Many Congressional Tributes to First Jew In High Court

Washington — (P) — The retirement of Justice Louis D. Brandeis from the supreme court brought a chorus of senatorial demands today that a westerner be appointed to the seat he held for nearly 23 years.

Only one member of the court, western legislators pointed out, comes from beyond the Mississippi river. He is Justice Pierce Butler of Minnesota.

The 82-year-old Brandeis, whose shock of unruly iron-gray hair made him a picturesque figure on the bench, made known his decision to retire in a one-sentence note to President Roosevelt late yesterday.

An hour before, the venerable jurist had stepped down from his high-backed chair in a crowded courtroom for the last time. As he disappeared with his colleagues behind the heavy draperies, he gave no public indication that he never would return to his place at the left of Chief Justice Hughes.

Roosevelt lauds Brandeis The president, recuperating at the White House from the grippe, promptly penned a letter of regret, in which he said:

"The country has needed you through all these years, and I hope you will realize as your old friends do, how unanimo the nation has been in its gratitude to you."

Congressional tributes to Brandeis were general, in contrast to the furor aroused over his appointment by President Wilson in 1916. He was the first Jew to sit on the court and his critics had pictured him as a radical and a violent partisan. It was more than four months before the senate confirmed his nomination, 47 to 22.

In his long service, Brandeis constantly enunciated the rights of the common man and vigorously supported social experimentation. He voted to sustain much of the New Deal legislation which a majority of the court held unconstitutional.

Fourth Appointment Mr. Roosevelt now is embroiled in a half-dozen serious controversies over appointments to federal posts and his designation of Brandeis's successor may show whether he intends to listen to senatorial recommendations. The appointment will be the president's fourth to the court.

Western senators are certain to look askance at any appointee who does not come from their region, and were quick to suggest candidates.

Senators Adams and Johnson, Colorado Democrats, declared their support of Federal Judge Sam Bratton of New Mexico. Senator Connally (D-Texas) said he would recommend Federal Circuit Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson, Jr., of Texas, but added that Bratton "would be fine."

Senator Gillette (D-Iowa) advocated appointment of Dean Wiley Rutledge of the University of Iowa Law school, who was reported to have been under consideration when Felix Frankfurter recently was selected to succeed the late Justice Cardozo.

Another name prominently mentioned was that of Justice Harold Stephens of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. Stephens is a resident of Utah.

Administration senators said the president had been swayed in considering the last appointment by arguments for sectional representation, but had decided to appoint Frankfurter, a Harvard law professor, on the advice of Senator Norris (D-Nebr.).

Norris said today he did not think geographical questions were vitally important in the selection of

Speech Is Silver (Unless It's Brass)

The Babel of scatter-brain notions and "ideologies" that are today plaguing the world is slowly but surely producing a "language paralysis," says a correspondent to various papers. Maybe so. Personally, we haven't noticed it. "Language paralysis" means "loss of the power of speech," and so far we are concerned, we shouldn't object to seeing it spread to a good many self-selected spoochifiers we could best, especially in classified want-ads. This one proved it by bringing good results.

Hitler Gives New Battleship To Reich; Hails Bismarck in Creation of Present Germany

Hamburg — (P) — Chancellor Hitler today gave Germany's new 35,000-ton battleship the name of Bismarck, the iron chancellor, declaring Bismarck stood forth from among all others who helped create the "pre-conditions for the present day greater Germany."

Hitler said the destruction of the German fleet after the World War today grips painfully at our hearts and shouted that national socialism "tore the nation out of its rut and led it to new domestic and foreign successes."

For these successes, he said, the nation owed deep gratitude to those creating the pre-conditions for the third reich.

Patches of Oil May Offer Clue to Fate Of Missing Airplane

Juneau, Alaska — (P) — Discovery of oil patches off Point Bishop lent an ominous note today to the hunt for a Marine Airways plane which vanished in a storm Sunday en route here from Ketchikan.

Searchers indicated, however, they were not discouraged by the report of Captain K. Bayers of the gasboat Wanderer that he had sighted several patches of light oil on an inlet near where the lost-ton-equipped ship, with at least five — perhaps six — aboard, was believed forced down.

They expressed hope Lon Cope, an experienced and skilled pilot, had been able to bring his passengers down safely in some isolated area. With this hope, and the prospect of clearing weather, they planned to continue their hunt by sea and by air today.

Captain Bayers said it could not be determined whether the oil patches had been left by the plane, which vanished in a storm.

Hoover Outlines Party 'Mission' In Lincoln Speech

Says Peace, Economic Restoration and Freedom Primary Aims

New York—(AP)—In a speech recalling his own efforts to meet "the storm of 1929," Herbert Hoover last night outlined the Republican party to a threefold mission, including preservation of "peace for America," in which he said lay its "greatest opportunity since Abraham Lincoln."

Keynoting the fifty-third annual Lincoln day dinner of the National Republican club at which other Republican leaders from as far west as Colorado spoke—the only living former president made his most vigorous attack since 1936 upon the Roosevelt administration.

The "great restorer" of the Republican party other than peace, he said, must be "economic restoration and preservation of the country's 'high purposes' of freedom which 'are being undermined by the policies now pursued at home and by alien theories from abroad.'"

Dewey Introduced

Hoover appeared on the platform with a long list of party dignitaries. The second seat of honor was occupied by District Attorney Theodore E. Dewey of New York, the unsuccessful gubernatorial candidate of last year. He was introduced but did not speak.

The Hoover address was delivered amid general predictions of others who shared the platform with him that the Republicans would win the presidency in 1940; and stretched behind him was a great banner reading: "1940 Victory, Through Unity."

Hoover devoted much of his address to developing the assertion that the Republican party was the party of "true liberalism." From this he went on to say that it was his own Republican administration which, in 1930, was "the first to announce the national obligation that no American through no fault of his own should go hungry or cold, and first to organize nationwide relief for the unemployed."

Organized Relief

"And," he said amid shouts from the ballroom where he spoke before a crowd officially estimated at some 2,000, "it organized relief in a fashion which excluded corruption, waste and demoralization of community responsibility. And it is high time to return to a system that does not play politics with human misery."

Other major speakers included Governor Julius P. Heil of Wisconsin.

"The people of Wisconsin," said Governor Heil, "and the people of this country are tired of family dynasties in government."

"There is no place nor need in America," he added, "today or ever, for one man government. What we need is more representative government; better representative government."

Zimmerman Fears U. S. Heading Toward War

Saginaw, Mich.—(AP)—In a Lincoln day address Monday, Fred R. Zimmerman, Republican secretary of state in Wisconsin, expressed a fear that President Roosevelt's policies would involve the nation in war.

Zimmerman said the president was following the same course pursued by Woodrow Wilson. President Wilson, Zimmerman said, "sowed a wind from which we today reap a whirlwind harvest."

New Deal policies generally were described by Zimmerman as having produced nothing but "colossal failure."

Native Philippine Women Like To Smoke Cigar Wrong End to

Smoking a cigar with the lighted end in your mouth doesn't qualify as a habit among many older Philippine women—it's a habit.

So went a story told by John McCormick, Freedom High school instructor, in his talk about the Philippine Islands yesterday at the noon meeting of the Appleton Lions club.

McCormick, who worked for a mining company for more than a year on the islands, remarked that there is "little smoking among younger native women in the islands, but the older ones smoke cigars."

He said when he first observed them holding cigars in their mouths while they carried commodities on their head, he was puzzled over the fact the ends of the stogie were not lit.

"I finally found out that the women stuck the burning end in their mouths. The reason is that the cigars are so loosely wrapped you can't draw smoke through from one end to the other—so they do the only thing that's left to do—smoke 'em moving in very rapidly," McCormick said, and gradually are gaining economic control of the Philippines. Because the climate is suited to them, because their own islands are overcrowded, and because of their business ability, they are dominating the business life of the Philippines.

"The average Filipino is a poor business man," McCormick said. "In cities and villages on the islands you'll find most of the shops run by Hindus, Chinese, and Japanese."

The principal difficulty in the process of molding the Philippines to the point where complete independence will work smoothly is the heterogeneous nature of the people, McCormick said.

"We are inclined to regard them as one race, which is wrong. There are 90 different dialects used on the islands and there is little unity among the peoples."

McCormick described the life and topography of the islands, dwelling on types of native homes, the principal products grown, and the mining activities of foreign firms.

State Products Used In Dam Construction

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau

Washington—Wisconsin contributed $358,614.28 worth of its products to the construction of Grand Coulee Dam on the Columbia river in Washington, the Department of Interior announces.

Forty-five states have contributed and have shared the 46 million dollars which has been spent for materials and supplies for the dam, said to be the largest in the world, up to Jan. 1, 1939.

In the last year alone, Wisconsin sold $62,467.68 worth of goods, out of a total spent for the dam of $11,862,133.37.

The total expenditures to date, according to the report, is $74,730,010.93, of which $28,732,328.25 was for labor.

College Can Give Sense of Values, Dean Gilkey Says

Education Is Development of Capacities, Students Told

"Education is more than a learning of things; it is a development of capacities," Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, dean of the chapel of the University of Chicago, said at the Lawrence convocation religious service Monday morning in Memorial chapel.

"I now realize," said Dr. Gilkey, "that if I were to be put under examination for the courses I took while in college, the betting is very good that I would flunk every single one of them, for everything I knew has turned into the ashes of memory. And yet that college education has proved invaluable. It is true that I have forgotten most of what I have learned and I have lost most of the capacities which I so painstakingly developed."

Dean Gilkey expressed the view that often the most important things in life are not easy to express and thus many people are unable to tell the explicit values they received from college. He believes the best that college gave him was the knowledge of the difference between what is most important and what is second or third in importance.

William James was one of Dr. Gilkey's college teachers and gave him an outstanding college experience. And yet Dr. Gilkey said, "What can I remember of William James' classes? Very little, for it is gone, but as long as I live I shall be a different man in my outlook on life because I lived, breathed, in a carbon-laden atmosphere this great teacher created."

Like Tree

Dr. Gilkey likened human lives and experiences to a tree, whose roots, the obvious features, seem of greatest importance, and yet whose real importance is found in the invisible carbon of its leaves. "Certain of our elements or characteristics are as obvious as the roots of the tree, and some are even more subtle than the atmosphere. Yet it is the obvious things which are temporary and the subtle which are inconspicuous and yet permanent."

He said he believes this has an important application to present day democracy, and told of a survey conducted among college students. This survey revealed that over a fourth understood very little of what is implied in democracy and that the other three-fourths thought of democracy as a slogan. "Democracy is a difficult art," Dr. Gilkey said. "Democracy should be mastered in an atmosphere like this—where there is carbon in the air." Dr. Gilkey said, "for here in college we must learn the difficult art if we are to understand and practice the real democracy."

TWO CONFESS THEY TRIED $15,000 EXTORTION PLOT

Detective Inspector Charles Tierney (right) said in St. Paul, Minn., that Matthew W. Siegbauer (left), an ex-convict, and Harold McAvoy (center), 29, signed confessions that they demanded $15,000 from Charles Ward, millionaire manufacturer, (left below) under threats to link him with the unsolved Walter Liggett murder. The money was not paid.

Bill Would Destroy Records Covering 103 Years of History

Madison—(AP)—Rushed through a senate third reading last week and advanced toward passage was an inconspicuous 17-line bill titled 475, introduced by Conrad Shearer (R), Kenosha, and relating to "destruction of obsolete documents in the office of the secretary of state."

Behind the Shearer bill, however, are 103 years of Wisconsin history, vividly portrayed in the aged documents in massive capitol vaults which the measure would destroy.

In these vaults, which run from the first floor of the capitol where the secretary of state's office is located, to the basement, are millions of executive, legislative, and judicial papers dating from 1838 when Wisconsin became a territory of the United States and 1848 when it was admitted to statehood.

By constitution and legislative decree, the secretary of state must file copies of all laws, appointments, oaths of office, ballots, assessment rolls, election expenses, state committee hearings, joint resolutions, memorials to congress and other records.

Into the three vaults which cover 3,401 square feet these state papers have poured unceasingly over the years. The press became so great by 1915 that by statute the secretary of state was allowed, at his discretion, to destroy certain of them.

These included peddler's license applications when over two years old, lists of officers of agricultural societies when over two years old, and lists of creameries and cheese factories when over five years old.

However, the bulk, especially bills and other legislative papers, had to be preserved in metal filing cabinets which stretch 15 feet from concrete floor to ceiling.

Curiously, by law, it is provided that vouchers relating to claims against the United States in two years in which Wisconsin furnished troops, can not be destroyed without consent of the legislature.

Consequently, these vouchers are in permanent storage.

Many other historical manuscripts may be found in the vaults. Records of school funds, finances, tax payments gather dust on the shelves. Legislative journals, which were written in longhand until 1885, pay tribute to the men who helped write the state's basic laws.

In one of the earliest journals are signatures of the founding fathers who framed Wisconsin's constitution. Since the constitution which carried their signatures is said to be missing, this journal is the only source showing their original handwriting. A copy has been made for the Wisconsin Historical Society.

Despite their longevity, most of the papers appear to be in good condition. A special air-conditioning apparatus which forces air into the vaults through a wet cheese cloth has not been used recently because of its expense. The only time the vaults were dusted—20 odd years ago—it took one man three weeks to do the job.

Access to various records is made easy by a decimal system of classification. Each type of paper has its own number and an index immediately discloses its location.

Department of State attaches admit that most records are rarely used. An occasional researcher comes in for certified copies are made for court evidence. Gasoline vouchers and tax bills, however, are frequently consulted when refunds are requested from the state treasurer.

Now the Shearer bill proposes to permit 10 years after filing the destruction of "legislative bills and bill envelopes, resolutions, joint resolutions, memorials to congress, and miscellaneous legislative papers and reports."

When state records are ready to be destroyed, they are first offered to the Historical Society which selects those of possible value. By law, nominating papers actually must be destroyed. These are burned in the capitol heating plant. Everything else is sold as junk.

Lawmakers Saving Money by Putting In Fewer New Laws

Legislators Introduce Fewer Bills Than in Previous Sessions

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—Members of the 1939 Wisconsin legislature are not nearly as prolific as were their predecessors in 1937 and other previous sessions, it was shown today with the disclosure that senators to date have introduced only 109 bills, while assemblymen have been equally moderate, 100 of them having proposed thus far 269 measures. There are 33 senators.

In the 1937 session, which was dominated by Progressives, lawmakers presented approximately 1500 bills, only a small percentage of which, however, reached the statute books.

Republican legislative spokesmen pointed out proudly today that the paucity of bills in the present session under their control is in line with their economy policies. It has been estimated that each bill presented eventually costs the state $100 for printing, distribution, and other costs.

Another reason, probably is the fact that most of the legislative newcomers who entered with the Republican landslide and who are waiting to familiarize themselves with legislative procedure before broaching their ideas on new laws.

The northeastern Wisconsin members are typical of the legislative membership. They have introduced few bills; some of them have introduced more.

Assemblyman Leo Niemuth of Winnebago county (R) is author of measures to exempt homestead property, not exceeding $5,000 in value, from transfer to the county as a condition to receiving old age assistance, and to reduce auto license fees to $5 and $10 for cars weighing less than 3600 pounds, and more than that amount, respectively.

Calvin's Bills

Assemblyman Mark Catlin Jr., Appleton Republican, was responsible for the introduction of one of the first bills in the session this session, to abolish the state department of commerce.

He also proposed civil service for county highway patrolmen, an amendment to the state election laws to allow candidates to win nominations on two tickets and to run on the two tickets in the general election, to reorganize that state banking commission, and several minor measures.

Assemblyman William Sweeney of Brown county, (D), has reintroduced his favorite bill, a proposal to provide a maximum highway speed limit of 60 miles per hour in daylight and 50 at night, and to enable county boards to set lower speed limits by ordinance.

Assemblyman Charles Budlong of Marinette county, (R), is author of bills to repeal the Wisconsin Development authority, to allow cities to extend the deadline for payment of real estate taxes, to prohibit a hunter to kill a deer from hunting the rest of the open season, and to prohibit truck drivers from working more than 48 hours in any one week.

Assemblyman Melvin Schlytter of Shawano county, although a newcomer, surprised his mates by coming to the capitol this session with a determination to take the state out of the fire insurance business in which it had been engaged for a quarter of a century.

The Wittberg Republican predicts passage for his bill which would limit state insurance to state property only and prohibit the insuring of other forms of property in the state insurance fund.

Assemblyman Harold Lytle of Green Bay (D), reintroduced a bill which was lost in the conference attending the closing days of the 1937 session of which he was a member. It would provide that delinquent municipal water utility dues be collected in the same manner as delinquent personal property taxes and to enable the utility to receive a cash deposit in advance of service. Another bill, introduced by Lytle, would require that all cities to install the minimum sanitary facilities in a private home and collect the cost of such improvements by special assessment in installments.

Assemblyman Carl Peik of Chillicothe, Progressive from the northeast, has introduced a bill proposing to require the state to pay one-half of the cost of the salaries and board of children in detention homes.

County boards would be enabled to appropriate money for public museums in the county, under the terms of a later bill by Winnebago county's Niemuth, while Assemblyman Julius Spearbrocker of Clintonville, (R), would require a one dollar fishing license of all resident fishermen over sixteen years whether they fish with rod and reel or hook and line.

Another measure by Schlytter would enable counties or municipalities to waive penalties and interest on delinquent 1937-38 real estate taxes if the tax is paid before October 1, 1941, while Catlin has introduced an important bill concerning picketing. He would make it illegal for anyone to picket an establishment which is not a party to a labor dispute, and require that no labor dispute is deemed to exist unless there is a strike or lock-out.

$500 to Veterans

Niemuth has introduced another bill which provides for a state appropriation of $500 to the Wisconsin chapter of the Rainbow Division veterans of Appleton for paying connection expenses in 1939 and 1940, while A. D. Shimek, Kewaunee county Democrat, is sponsoring a bill which provides that the teacher tenure law will not apply to any teacher 70 years of age or over.

Senator Francis Vindora of the Manitowish district, (D), is pushing bills to segregate highway receipts in a separate highway fund, and to transfer present highway appropriation balances in the general fund to the state highway fund and to abolish prison manufacture of office furniture. He has also announced that he will sponsor the driver's license bill introduced at the last session.

New Physics Equipment at High School Is Aid in Experiments

Dispelling the myth that "girls aren't any good in science," four senior girls in Clem Ketchum's physics class at Appleton high school recently completed the experiments in the measurement of heat with the least percentage of error.

Although 80 to 10 per cent error in heat experiments generally is considered reasonable, according to Ketchum, Sally Rothschild and Miriam Moser, working as partners, had only .05 per cent error, and Fern Barth and Vivian Bartlein ended with 7 per cent error. In all fairness, however, it must be recorded that William Wolfe and Dan Fuzsman scored with only a 3 per cent variation from the perfect answer.

Results as a whole, Ketchum points out, were unusually accurate

Want Westerner As Successor to Justice Brandies

Justices, but predicted a westerner might be chosen.

There was some mention of Senators Schwellenbach (D-Wash.), both administration supporters, but neither had any comment.

Should the president again ignore sectional demands, there were reports he might consider Federal Judge Florence E. Allen of Ohio; Samuel Rosenman and Ferdinand Pecora, New York Supreme court justices; Attorney General Frank Murphy; Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, and James M. Landis, dean of the Harvard law school.

Full Pay Provided

There was speculation whether Justice James C. McReynolds, 77-year-old dean of the court, might follow Brandeis into retirement. Some friends, however, predicted he would serve until after the 1940 presidential election.

Under a law enacted two years ago, a justice who has served 10 years can retire after the age of 70 on his full pay of $20,000 a year.

Brandeis gave no reason for his retirement, but it was assumed he had been motivated by advancing age and recent ill health. He has been intensely interested in the Zionist movement to establish a homeland for the Jews in Palestine, and presumably will devote much of his time to Jewish problems.

Brandeis cares little for Washington social life, but he and his wife entertain a number of friends each Sunday afternoon. He likes to talk with young people, and often starts conversations with strangers on the street in an effort to find out what the people are thinking about.

Justice Brandeis, delivered two of the supreme court's major decisions during the present term.

One of them gave the states virtually unlimited power to prevent sale of intoxicating liquors. True opinion upheld Michigan and Missouri laws barring importation of alcoholic beverages from other states which enact discriminatory legislation.

The other held that if a patented invention is applicable to different uses, the owner may restrict a licensee to a particular field and exclude the product from other uses.

Article by Frampton In Music Periodical

The current issue of the Music Educators Journal contains an article by John Ross Frampton, advocating teaching harmony to high school students by a course in analysis of familiar compositions, instead of the usual method of writing exercises.

The journal is the official organization of the National Association of Public School Music Teachers. According to Mr. Frampton, such a course would make better sight readers, since the students would then read their music as chord masses, not every note separately. It would not attempt to teach them how to write music, and therefore could omit fussy rules of chord progression and voice leading."

as compared with the experiments of other years. He contributes the students' success to the multiple equipment which is now available in the new physics laboratory. In the old building experiments had to be conducted with groups of six or eight; now students are free to work more or less independently with partners.

During the course of the heat unit the 42 physics students measured the specific heat of aluminum, the heat of fusion of ice and the heat given up as steam condenses. The maximum error on the first experiment was 7 per cent for the entire group, the average, 2 1/2 per cent. Six per cent was the maximum on the second problem with an average of 3.44 per cent. The percentage of error was exceptionally low on the third exercise with 3.33 as the maximum and .71 as the average.

"I liked this experiment because speed and accuracy were needed," wrote Jim Campbell in his discussion of the problem, indicating the general attitude of the students toward the work. Fred Trezize thought it was one of the most interesting experiments he performed all year, while Owen Larson liked it "because he learned things about refrigeration and how to prevent vegetables from freezing."

Or Ketchum himself put it, the experiment acquainted students with the meaning of scientific accuracy, showed them how to get first-hand information, and gave them some insight into everyday phenomena.

Sen. LaFollette Sure Third Party Will be Organized in Nation

Washington—(AP)—Senator LaFollette (R-Wis.) said today developments in this congress had increased his conviction that there would be a new political alignment eventually bringing about a third party.

"There is a fundamental split in the Democratic party between the liberal and conservative wings," LaFollette said in an interview. "This has created a situation where the party is impotent to carry out any program formulated by either the liberals or the conservatives."

"The Republicans have thrown in their support with the conservative wing, and this results in an informal coalition, which, whether one wing or another wins a minor victory, results in a tendency for stalemate."

LaFollette said he found in such stalemate the fuel for political dissatisfaction which in time would force a political realignment. He emphasized, however, that he was making no predictions such a realignment would come in 1940. What happens then will depend, he said, largely on the sort of men nominated and the platforms adopted by the two major parties.

Attack Kaukauna Power Contract As 'Unreasonable'

Public Service Commission Hears Complaints Against Power Deal

Madison—A contract between the city of Kaukauna and the Green Bay and Mississippi Canal company providing for transfer of certain water rights in the Fox river was termed "unreasonable" yesterday before the public service commission.

J. R. Clifford, Green Bay, attorney for the Citizens' Protective League of Kaukauna, told commissioners Fred S. Hunt, Robert A. Nixon, and R. F. Green that terms of the 25-year lease were restrictive and of "questionable" value.

Kaukauna Cagers Drill for Tilt at Shawano Friday

Little's Squad in Third Place With Three Games to Play

Kaukauna—Still holding on to third place in Northwestern conference play despite a 23 to 22 defeat at the hands of the Menasha Blue-jays last Friday, Coach Paul E. Little's high school cagers began preparations this week for the last three games of the year. Friday night the Kaws journey to Shawano to face the league leading Indians, next week to New London to battle the fourth place Bulldogs, and the week after concluding conference play here against Clintonville.

Shawano defeated the Kaws here on Dec. 20, 35 to 16, with Bill Reed ringing up 18 points. A win at Shawano would make the season a success for Kaukauna, inasmuch as last year's Class B state champions have won 26 in a row, including 9 consecutive league games this season.

Scoring records for Kaukauna's 11 games this year show the home team with a 3-point edge in the total count, making 266 points to opponents' 263, an average of 24.2 per game. The high mark for the year is 33 points against Clintonville, and the lowest effort 16 against Shawano.

Alger Still Leading

Bill Alger added four points to his string Friday and continues to lead in the race for individual scoring honors with 69. With only three more games to play Alger is so comfortably ahead of Carl Giordana and Don Bixel with 40 apiece, and appears certain to lead the Kaws for the second straight year. He is a sophomore. Following Giordana and Bixel is Paul Koch with 36 points. Koch, senior forward, has totaled 26 points in the last three games, 9 against West DePere, 8 against St. Mary's of Menasha and 9 against Menasha. Other Kaukauna scorers are Junior Swedberg, 27, Willis Ranganette, 15, Robert Derus, 2, and James Sanders, 1.

The Kaws will concentrate again on defense this week, with the object of stopping the high scoring games played last year. With three games already broken the conference scoring record he set last year. Little will also drill the Kaws on free throws, where weakness Friday night cost them the ball game against Menasha.

More Petitions Filed Asking Cut In Council Wages

Voters' Request May be Submitted at Council Meeting Wednesday

Petitions carrying 177 additional signatures and asking aldermen to cut their own salaries to $250 per year or to submit the question to voters in the spring election were filed in city hall today.

The new petitions bring the number of signatures filed to 1,533, about 170 more than are needed for a referendum request. Under the law, petitioners must have at least 15 per cent of the vote for governor in the last election. In this case that figure is 1,361, according to Carl J. Becker, city clerk.

The petitions were filed by a group of interested citizens after aldermen refused to act on the 1938 salary ordinance at the first meeting in February. A previous council meeting called to consider the salary question, also was adjourned without discussing wages.

The petitions ask aldermen to cut their salaries from $500 to $250 per year or to submit the question to a vote of the people in a referendum. The city clerk and Harry P. Hoefel, city attorney, are checking the names on the petitions and the attorney will investigate the legal angles before they are submitted to the council, probably Wednesday night. The council has 30 days in which to consider the petitions.

County Board to Repay $64,000 to Courthouse Fund

Supervisors Spend Opening Session With Routine Business

The county board this morning opened its mid-winter meeting at the courthouse with a session spent principally in allowing paid claims, hearing reports and resolutions passed by other county boards on various matters.

Supervisor Thomas Long, Appleton, asked how long the stone obtained through the project was serviceable on the roads and provisions were made for the farm-to-market road committee to take the city supervisors on a tour of inspection.

The highway committee was authorized to sell equipment to municipalities in the county in cases of emergency.

Bill on Delinquent Tax Interest Rate Meets Opposition

Flat 6 Per Cent Annual Charge Proposed in Amended Measure

Madison — (AP)—The Paulson bill reducing the rate of interest local governing bodies may charge on delinquent taxes encountered stiff opposition in the senate today.

The original measure, by Oscar Paulson (D), LaCrosse, proposed a flat rate of 5 per cent a year in place of the current charge of eight-tenths of 1 per cent a month or nine and six tenths per year. Through an amendment proposed by the committee on corporations and taxation the proposed rate was boosted to 6 per cent annually.

Even with this change senators who said they spoke in the interest of the municipalities were dissatisfied with the bill. A vote was delayed by adjournment.

Cornelius Young (D), Milwaukee, and Marvin Duell (R), Fond du Lac, warned that passage of the bill would create an incentive for taxpayers to let their taxes accumulate, thus placing municipalities in a serious financial position. Young contended a taxpayer who has to borrow to meet this payments would let the city "hold the bag" at 6 per cent instead of borrowing from a bank where he would have to pay about the same rate.

Defends Measure

Paulson defended the measure as a type of relief to distressed home owners. Harry Solens (D), Port Washington, retorted that municipalities that large corporations would take advantage of the reduced rate. He declared industrial firms do not want to have their financial standing marred by failure to pay their taxes on time.

Several bills affecting state disbursements were discussed and referred to the finance committee. One provides state educational aid to all county homes maintaining approved school facilities for children. Another, with an amendment by William A. Freehoff (R), Waukesha, allots $300,000 annually during the next biennium and $400,000 from May to July of this year for a proposed new indemnity program for eradication of Bangs disease and tuberculosis in dairy herds.

Anticipating that the assembly bill will soon pass its bill abolishing appropriations to the Wisconsin Development Authority, senate majority leaders postponed action on a similar measure by Bolens. The WDA repealer is expected to pass both houses with a likelihood the assembly bill by Charles A. Budlong (R), Marinette, will get the right of way.

Anthony Gawronski (D), introduced in the senate today a bill requiring the Milwaukee school board to hold a public hearing on its budget before submitting it to the common council.

Test of 'De-Inked' Newsprint Is Successful in Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh — (AP)—Newsprint created from "de-inked" waste paper has passed its most severe test and the inventor predicted today that the process he believes may revolutionize the industry would be producing the paper commercially in a matter of months.

Newsprint is the paper on which your daily newspaper is printed. It now comes largely from Canadian wood pulp.

Last night the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette tested the new paper. Dr. W. F. Hochstetter, Pittsburgh inventor, smiled as he watched the high-speed presses run off 8,000 copies each containing four pages made from his processed newsprint.

Even skeptical pressmen praised the new paper's resistance as it rolled through the presses at the rate of 40,000 an hour. Editors thought the pages printed on the waste paper newsprint seemed easier to read because, they said, the paper was whiter.

Demonstrating that the new newsprint could not be torn easily, Mechanical Superintendent F. H. Winch of the Post-Gazette exclaimed:

"It's in the bag. This paper is better than anything we've ever had. It would have stood up just as well at the rate of 60,000 an hour."

Dr. Hochstetter, who claims his process will reduce the price of newsprint from the present scale of $50 to $35 a ton for wood pulp to $30 to $35 said it would be "several months, at least" before commercial production could be started.

Lawrence Praises Work of Brandeis In Supreme Court

Says Retired Justice Was Man of Peculiar Genius

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—The supreme court of the United States has lost one of the ablest jurists the bench has had in all its history. The "retirement" of Justice Brandeis leaves a vacancy which may never be filled again with a man of his peculiar genius.

Back in 1916, when President Wilson appointed Louis Brandeis, the attack was bitter and emotional. His intellectual integrity was assailed, his attitude toward public problems was viewed by conservatives as extremely radical, and there was an effort to block his confirmation which constituted one of the fiercest fights on a judicial appointment that the senate has ever witnessed.

Yet today Louis Brandeis retires amid the plaudits of conservatives and radicals alike. During the years in which he used his powerful and penetrating mind to tackle the most complicated of legal questions, he gradually came to be regarded by conservatives as a justice who had a deeper respect for private property rights than they had imagined. Again and again, the conservatives have quailed from his decisions to formulate their briefs against radical doctrine.

But, while Mr. Brandeis was singularly fair to conservatives, he was, on the other hand, never the defender of exploitation in any form. He was quick to strike down arbitrary practices, if he deemed them unconstitutional, whether they emanated from radical or conservative legislation. Generally speaking, he has steadfastly maintained that the state legislatures and the congress should not be interfered with by the judicial branch of the government in working out social and economic problems within the constitution. If he leaned in any direction, it was toward the untrammelled rights of the several states to be considered as 48 laboratories in which social and economic legislation might be worked out experimentally in our democracy. And if his social and economic doctrine could be epitomized, it was constantly a warning against big business and the encouragement of little businesses as against competitors comprising powerful aggregations of capital.

Consider Stephens
Undoubtedly, President Roosevelt will feel free now to give geographical considerations more attention by appointing a westerner to the bench, because, when he appointed Justice Frankfurter, there were indications that he also favored Judge Harold Stephens of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, who hails from Utah. Mr. Stephens was an assistant attorney general in charge of antitrust legislation under the New Deal before he was elevated to the bench. He represents, however, the same kind of broad-gauged judicial-mindedness which is so characteristic of Justice Stanley Reed. His promotion to the supreme court would, therefore, please radicals and conservatives alike.

As a matter of fact, men of pronounced prejudices or preconceived class consciousness are not likely to be confirmed so readily by the senate as men of the Judge Stephens type, and that's why it would not be surprising to see the Utah jurist named to succeed Justice Brandeis.

Ft Wayne Housing Experiment May be Solution to Problem

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Perhaps there is no news in government activities that don't threaten to involve us in Europe or don't cost at least a billion dollars. There are such activities and Roosevelt is encouraging them.

For instance, a small experiment in housing at Ft. Wayne, Ind., has so interested Roosevelt that he is urging the Federal Housing administration to undertake a similar plan at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., near Hyde Park. Movies of the Ft. Wayne experiment were shown at the White House and Roosevelt instantly saw the possibilities in the operation.

More than 40 houses have been built to rent—and pay for themselves—at $250 a week. Four-room houses, modern and better insulated than most $20,000 houses. They are built with WPA labor, but it isn't leaf-raking so you haven't heard much about it.

Frank Watson, a young Indiana builder, developed the idea. He rented an old building in Ft. Wayne, installed a few pieces of machinery such as a power saw, wood-drilling and thread-cutting machines, ordered a supply of 2-by-4 timbers, large sheets of plywood and rock wool for insulation. The trick was to devise a kind of construction that didn't require the services of expert carpenters. The WPA workmen make these materials up into panels, or sections of walls, and these sections are hauled to the site and bolted together over a concrete floor and the house is practically done. Materials cost $900. WPA pays the labor.

Two local banks and an insurance company finance the project. FHA guarantees the mortgage, which is on a 4 1/2 per cent tax-exempt basis. The rent, $250 a week, will pay out in 15 years.

The Ft. Wayne housing authority holds title to the houses and thus insures upkeep of the property. As the houses are practically indestructible, it is only necessary to put on a coat of paint occasionally and educate the tenants not to pile the coal in the bathtub. Any family living in a house without modern plumbing is eligible to rent. Thus the enterprise offers no competition to the regular real-estate market because it operates in the level below, appealing to families that are forced by poverty to stay out of the normal market. A. F. of L. leaders in Ft. Wayne objected to the use of WPA labor. But the C.I.O. was agreeable, knowing that if prevailing wages had to be paid, the houses wouldn't be built. Labor could gain nothing by opposing this use of WPA labor.

Attractive Substitutes for Unhealthy Shacks
Motion pictures of the houses show them to be simple, practical and attractive substitutes for the unhealthy shacks previously occupied by the renters. The idea has large possibilities in the south and in medium-sized communities where land cost does not interpose of view of the present supreme court on certain fundamental issues, the retirement of Justice Brandeis does not create a change. There is still a combination of five justices of the original nine who invalidated the NRA because it was an unlawful delegation of legislative power, and the same five—Messrs. Hughes, Stone, Butler, Reynolds and Roberts—would probably agree in applying the brakes to legislative extremes of the NRA sort. There is, on the other hand, a combination of five so-called liberals—Messrs. Hughes, Stone, Roberts, Reed and Frankfurter, who would constitute a majority out of the nine in favor of upholding legislation which gives the federal government power to carry on experiments in the social and economic field, such as the Wagner labor relations act or the minimum wage and hour law, which latter act has not yet been passed upon by the courts.

The "retirement" of Justice Brandeis is in accordance with a law which permits him to receive a salary of $20,000 a year for life. This is not called a "pension," though it really amounts to the same thing. The idea that justices who "retire" may still be called to active service on the circuit courts of appeals or the district courts keeps them within the protection of the constitution as against a sudden reduction in pension. That's why all justices are careful to use the word "retire" instead of "resign" in communicating formally to the president their withdrawal from the supreme court. (Copyright, 1939) afford. The Ft. Wayne method may be the answer.

In the field of public art, the decoration of public buildings, the government has cut into the lucrative monopoly of a small group of favored professionals and is giving opportunities for recognition to talented persons who have been denied it before.

The treasury department, which erects most of the government's public buildings, allots 1 per cent of the cost for decorative purposes. With that sum the chief of the treasury fine-arts section, Edward N. Bruce, an artist, conducts competitions. A large volume of remarkable talent has been discovered. Numerous second- and third-place winners have had their work taken for the New York World's fair and by private individuals.

Sculptors Did Well on Government Jobs
Under this program 420 mural and sculpture works have been installed in public buildings throughout the country for less than was spent on the sculpture in the new supreme court building and the archives building, out of which one sculptor drew $159,400 for two figures and hired a WPA worker to do part of the work. For work on these two buildings, one sculptor collected a total of $249,400 and another $189,000. The latter also drew $185,000 for sculpture on the post office building, totalling fees of $394,000 out of the three jobs. Nice work, but thanks to the new system you can't get much of it any more.

The Spanish Republic is dead. Perhaps a man with an ultra-sharp mind capable of making the keenest of distinctions could establish that it never lived.

But watching the army that streamed into France, an army that threw away its rifles in disgust, a vast column of defeat and disorganization, one can have no reasonable doubt concerning the preparation of the grave.

The Loyalists took with them some majestic paintings wrought centuries ago by proud and capable Spanish artists. Franco has protested this act and demanded the canvasses back.

He would do much better to let them go if he could provide the empty walls with a true and dramatic picture of what happened to Spain from 1931, when the King surrendered his regal authority, down to date.

For Alfonso quit like a gentleman when he found he wasn't wanted. Municipal elections had shown the rising tide of popular disapproval of the monarchy. Insofar as the King was concerned the Republic had his good wishes and blessing.

But what of the Republic? What of the men who ran it, what of the five years it existed, at least on paper, before the revolution burst in all its bloody bitterness?

Answering those questions accurately is probably more valuable to mankind than any one thing within the reach of mankind to answer.

It is not easy for Americans to conjure up a picture of what took place as soon as the Popular Front actually got into the saddle, nor is it any easier to picture the surrender of the Socialists to the Reds. The successful party in America does not either directly or otherwise murder, pillage or destroy its political opponents. But that is exactly what happened in Spain.

Students of contemporary history know full well that after the republic was set up, and particularly after the Popular Front influenced by the Reds came into power many leaders of the opposition were shot on the street, stabbed in their homes, kidnapped, broken and then flung into streams, while hundreds of churches were burned, churchmen cruelly assaulted and tortured, and every act of infamy and disgrace which foul minds could plan was perpetrated.

And still there was no revolt!

Those daily cables, told, however, of a rising tide of fear and horror that affected millions of Spain's law-abiding citizens when they found that the Popular Front which ruled would not exercise its authority, would not and did not arrest the criminals, or when arrests were made at the solicitation of citizens, the Reds were turned loose by these Socialists whose chums they had become. What, in the name of sense, could decent Spaniards do but revolt?

In short form such is the story of the life and death of the Spanish Republic. The authority given the Reds was used in bestial fashion. The conservative and Republican elements apparently stood the persecution and retreated before these criminal classes in power until the time came when further retreat would have been the most abject cowardice and result only in chains for every one.

By all means let the new Spanish government unearth some modern Goya, some artist of transcendent ability, some fearless man to paint in bitter scenes the awful history of the Spanish Republic, a government sold out to the Reds by the Socialists, and then gutted by fire and rape and murder according to the well-known principles of the matted jungle.

And when Franco is throttled with his great artist let him be loaned to Germany, Russia, Austria and Italy to repeat there the same series of paintings for the history of the several countries has been much the same, the story of democracy destroyed by the Reds.

And if the people who are still free cannot see or comprehend what has taken place, and that democracy's menace is violence, the Red's stab in the back, then they are as dull and as stupid as the ox, and merit little better treatment.

WAR DELAY

There is no immediate danger of war launched by Germany, thinks Sir Arthur Willert, a veteran British journalist whose talks to American audiences are regarded with much respect.

He says Germany is not ready, and it would be very inconvenient for her to fight in the spring or summer. Both

Germany and Italy start their terms of compulsory military service in the fall. Their armies don't get tuned up till the crops are harvested—then they have their field maneuvers and could launch a war if they wanted to.

At present, he insists, Germany is very short of food and must make the most of whatever she can grow, and needs all available men in the fields. Last year she drafted a quarter of a million Austrians to help with the harvest.

So the greatest threat of war would naturally come in late August or early September. But the favorable period then would be short, because there are likely to be heavy fogs from mid-October till March, interfering with the operations of the air force on which Hitler mainly depends for military effectiveness.

If this view is dependable, it gives Britain and France more than six months yet to catch up in their defensive preparations. And by that time they may be so much stronger that Hitler and Mussolini will not dare attack them.

COTTON'S LOSS ABROAD

Latest statistics on cotton make up a curious picture of brightness and shadow. Consumption by domestic mills in December last was 31 per cent ahead of a year ago and, with the exception of 1936, was the largest for the month in 12 years. The situation changed little in the first half of last month.

Now for the shadow. Exports in December, 1937, were exceptionally low, but for the same month of 1938 there was a further decline of 39 per cent, the 361,000 running bales sold abroad having been the smallest number since 1881. The shadow is deepened by the fact that exports of India cotton in the same month was two and one-half times more than a year earlier, and Brazil established a new high in sales abroad from August to October.

The Agriculture Department explains the American export lag is "largely attributable to the lowest level of cotton consumption in foreign countries in three years, to the further substitution of foreign cotton for American cotton and to the fact that some foreign users of American cotton have been reducing their stocks and others have increased stocks very little." Granting the lowest foreign consumption in three years, it does not explain the lowest export total in 58 years, particularly as Japan, our best customer, took three times as much last December as she did in the same month a year ago.

So one is led to conclude that the major reason, in the face of India's and Brazil's increases, is "further substitution of foreign cotton for American." And the major reason for substitution was pegging the price for the American product above the world market price. That was a costly experiment, but, with our growers dependent on foreign markets for half their crop the question now is how to regain what we have lost.

DOCTOR TREATS A MACHINE

Appleton citizens who have ground their teeth and cursed under their breath at the unending clatter that accompanied repair work on streets and buildings read with sympathy, and perhaps not without some envy, the exploit of Dr. Logan Clendening, noted physician-author, in attacking a noisy air compressor with an ax.

The compressor, it seems, with its accompanying hammers and drills, had been operating for several weeks within a few yards of the physician's Kansas City home, in the construction of a new sewer. "Why don't you build your sewers in Omaha?" he demanded of the startled crew.

But the episode also illustrates the peril of operating in a field with which one is not familiar. Had one of the sewer diggers announced his intention of performing an appendectomy on a fellow worker, Dr. Clendening would not have been more horrified than was the workman to see the physician going after a high-pressure air tank with an ax. The workman would recognize such an act as one of the surest means of going heavenward, physically as well as spiritually. "He coulda' been blown clean over the hill," commented the foreman to police who interrupted the doctor's surgery on the compressor.

No, Dr. Clendening's treatment was faulty and his diagnosis incomplete. He should have given more attention to the tank's air pressure and his own blood pressure before operating.

But if they build any more streets near this office, we may call him in as a consultant.

A Verse for Today

GAZING AT AN OLD VALENTINE

I would laugh today if you sent me
A Valentine framed in lace.
The kind that I used to welcome
With a happy morning face.

I would laugh at the smiling Cupid,
The roses, the silver dove,
But no matter if it's outmoded,
I wouldn't laugh at your love!

THE MANTON CASE

Senior Judge Martin T. Manton of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals has resigned under fire.

His resignation came yesterday, three days after the World-Telegram's first disclosure of various business deals and borrowings in which Judge Manton was involved while on the bench, and some of which indicated connection,

DALE HARRISON'S
In Old New York

New York—Rarely do I yield to the temptation of writing poetry. There is no demand for my rhymes. I can't understand it.

Late at night, when I am unobserved, I sometimes dash off an epic or two, but when the morning dawns I realize the stuff is punk, so I dispose of it.

On Valentine's Day, however, the urge becomes irresistible. On this day my mind rocks with rhyme. Such as:

Valentine To An Old Girl:

When you were a youngster and I was one, too,
We pledged we would marry—you me, and I you.

You met a halfback from Michigan State
And I—well, I always could dig up a date.
Time ticked along, like a train always is ticking—
You did o.k., lass, and me? I'm not kicking.
But I can't help wondering what Fate might be.
If I had wed you, lass—and you had wed me.

You can readily understand now why I write my poetry in the dead of night. I am taking an awful chance even letting this sample get bruited around, on account of it is certain to lead to a lot of Talk if Louella happens to see it. She is not given much to sentimentalizing over my childhood Loves. Therefore, I would appreciate it if none of you would say anything to her about this. She would be sure to pester me to tell her who the girl was, and frankly—I can't remember.

Valentine To The Income Tax Collector

When comes each-year the Ides of March
I Always think of You, tall Gent;
Because (Boo Hoo!) I know it's due—
That darned old First Installment.

If, by some quirk, sad fate should jerk
You to the (Heav!) Hereafter,
I'd be a Cad and shout: "I'm glad!"
And rock my sides with laughter.

Valentine To My Old Hat

You and I have been together
Through Some very stormy weather,
Sometimes up and sometimes nether—
I think you're fine.

People talk. "It's seen its day.
Throw that frowsy lid away!"
My valentine.

Those are the comic valentines. But even Pagliacci's heart holds emotion under the mask of make-believe. When my thoughts turn to Loved Ones, meriment dies. In its stead there wells the ache of longing. It is then I know the insufficiency of words.

I write this on a Sunday morning. Rain peeks at the window. I make a list of three women to whom, most of all, I would send Valentines. Simple names all three, but to me none more beautiful: Susan, Claire and Helen—my grandmother, my mother and my sister.

If I could send them Valentines it would be to a single square of earth on the side of a windswept, snow-covered hill where Jonesone pines whimper to the touch of winter's wind. To Susan I would pen a verse of gratitude for the memory of one who taught me patience, tolerance, forbearance and, greater than all, the pricelessness of a singing soul.

To Claire would go no verse. I would just say how much I love her still, and how grateful I am in the memory that she was my mother. To Helen I would smile. Only that, "Helen would know. For all the gold in the haughty hills and all of Kimberly's gems I would not surrender a single memory of her loveliness.

Valentines to my three Great Loves, there on a windswept hill—

Looking Backward

10 YEARS AGO

Tuesday, Feb. 12, 1929

Word had been received from Washington that President Coolidge had sent to congress an estimate recommending an appropriation of $225,000 for a new post office in Appleton.

Harvey A. Schlitz was elected president of the newly organized Flower and Garden society, sponsored by Ony Johnston post of the American Legion. Miss Cora Gunther was elected secretary, and George W. Richard was elected president.

Aid was given to 110 families during the previous month, according to the report of Poor Commissioner E. G. Schuele. Total expenditures of the poor department for the month were $1,727.

The will of M. F. Barteau, filed in county court, disposed of an estate estimated at $75,000. The county board had called a special meeting to discuss snow removal in the county.

25 YEARS AGO

Tuesday, Feb. 12, 1914

Fire Chief George McGilgan and Assistant Chief John Coverly were overcome by smoke the previous evening while fighting a fire at the Fox River Paper Co. plant. Both men were in the hospital, and while their condition was not regarded as critical it was said they were lucky to have escaped with their lives. The fire caused a loss of about $5,000. The cause was not determined.

The board of education adopted a resolution stating that if vaccination was necessary for children attending school it also ought to be applied to patrons of motion picture theaters. Arthur Krueger, a student at New London high school, was injured by an explosion of dynamite in the school's laboratory.

Extra pressure applied in pumping plant to fight the Fox River Paper Co. fire caused a number of breaks in water mains in various parts of the city.

through business associates or lawyers, with court cases in which Judge Manton sat.

The World-Telegram's disclosure was followed by announcement of the federal Department of Justice investigation and by District Attorney Devere's forwarding of information to the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives.

Judge Manton has taken an easy way out. His explanation that he wished to avoid figuring in a controversy that might "cast reflection upon the court" will be taken for what it is worth.

Far more significant and to the point, we think, is the assurance from United States Attorney General Murphy that the judge's resignation "will facilitate the thorough investigation of charges against the jurist and protect the administration of justice by keeping the courts completely above suspicion."

This still remains the paramount need. The former governor of New York who is now president of the United States went so far as to declare in 1931:

"It is repugnant to our sense of the proper administration of justice that judges should be permitted to engage in business during their term of office. This principle admits of no doubt and should be applied throughout the state."

If to state and local judges, then assuredly to federal judges.

This is a principle that should be established and made clear by a thorough probing of the Manton case, regardless of his resignation and of any income tax or other investigations in which he may become involved.

It is a principle which should be made to prevail henceforth—if necessary by plain federal statute.—New York Herald Tribune.

A Bystander
In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—Part of Washington's present entanglement over entangling alliances is due, observers here believe, to a misunderstanding of terms.

No one recently has taken the trouble to explain fully the difference between a policy of "isolation" and a policy of avoiding "entangling alliances."

There was a time when some of the leaders of the country, notably John Adams, preferred complete isolation. Lamenting the insistence of hardy American mariners on trading with all nations, he said:

"If all intercourse between Europe and America could be cut off forever, if every ship we have were burnt, and the keel of another never to be laid, we might still be the happiest people on earth, and in fifty years, the most powerful."

An Alliance Even Then

But even in those years the country was forced to abandon any such idea of isolation and engage in a hard and fast entangling alliance. To obtain aid from France, this country pledged itself jointly with France that neither would end the war against England without giving the other six months notice. It was a commitment that Yankee leaders entered into ruefully and finally violated by signing a peace treaty without full knowledge of France, although there were no bitter feelings about it at the time.

That was just about the last "entangling alliance" this country has made. But it has been anything but isolationist. Some of our commercial treaties date back a hundred years and more. We have treaties of sanitation, armament, copyrights, commerce and culture. Every such treaty has been a step away from "isolation." But has this type of arrangement led toward "entangling alliances," of the kind Washington cautioned against?

In his Chautauqua speech during 1936, President Roosevelt explained the administration viewpoint:

"We are not isolationist except insofar as we seek to isolate ourselves completely from war."

French Alliance Died

After the World War an honest-to-goodness entangling alliance was written into the Versailles Treaty by cession of the League of Nations. One of the collateral treaties President Wilson signed committed us to help France defend the Rhine against Germany. It was designed to be only a temporary treaty, to protect France until the League of Nations could begin to function. But the Senate would have nothing to do with the League and the French treaty died with it.

Since then the country has avoided "entangling alliances" but has been anything but isolationist. Immediately after the war this country called the Naval conference and signed a naval limitations treaty. Followed then the nine-power and the four-power pacts to respect the open door in China as well as its territorial integrity, and the 50-power Kellogg pact for outlawry of war.

All the shouting about "our well established tradition of isolation" was not directed 'at such agreements. Even such an "isolationist" as Senator Borah was virtually the father, even if not the name-giver, to the Kellogg pact.

What this world needs is a good five-cent word that means isolation from war without at the same time meaning isolation from neighborly relations.

Program to be Given
At Dale Graded School

Dale — Pupils of Dale Graded school will present a program Friday evening. Walter P. Hagman, principal of Outagamie County Rural Normal school, Kaukauna, will show pictures and give a talk about his trip to Europe. A valentine party will be held Tuesday afternoon.

Decorating of the St. Paul's Lutheran church will start this week. The work is in charge of J. Kreft of Milwaukee. Services will be held in the church parlors until the work has been completed.

A troop of Boy Scouts from Appleton will be at Dale Thursday evening to assist the Dale Boy Scouts in initiation services. The exercises will be at the schoolhouse and are open to the public.

Services at St. Joseph's Catholic church will be at 8:30 Sunday morning.

MOTHER'S TERRIBLY SORRY BUT WHAT CAN SHE DO ABOUT IT?

Under the
CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—Legislatures have great respect for themselves, but curiously enough, that feeling is not always shared by the electorate.

In fact, were the average citizen of Wisconsin to speak frankly, it is at least probable that he holds opinions of many legislators which are considerably less than respectful.

A part of that attitude may be the American's traditional intellectual independence, the "show me" idea. But another part is undoubtedly due to the character, and the peculiar antics, of some clamorous personalities who find their way into every assembly of elected representatives.

In the last session of the legislature Wisconsin had Roland E. Kannerberg of Wausau, "the wild man from the North," who could display more ferocity on less important things than any other state senator within the memory of living politicians. The people last fall relieved him of his duties.

But in the meantime another candidate for such honors as Kannerberg's slot has appeared, this time in the assembly in the well-rounded person of Arthur J. Balzer of West Allis. Congress had his Zioncheck; the Wisconsin legislature has his Balzer.

Balzer's heart throbs for the taxpayers, for the old folks, for the workman, for the school children, for the unemployed, for the merchants, the bankers, in fact for everybody. And he'll tell all about it without much coaxing, preferably with a big crowd handy.

UNAFRAID

Balzer sponsors legislation against gambling; he won his seat by the flip of a coin when a Progressive tied him in the election last fall. He is a "liberal Democrat," and James Aloysius Farley is "my dear friend Jim."

To audiences he proclaims with a forensic catch in his deep, bass voice: "Balzer is not afraid," Balzer can take it.

Of course, before a packed house on the married women's bill, he belittles: "Balzer has received many telegrams asking him to oppose this bill; but Balzer is not alarmed."

Not the least of his accomplishments is a facile adaptability to the times. Two years ago he deserted his party, presumably because it wasn't "liberal" enough for a "liberal Democrat," and plumped with the Progressives who were then in the saddle. He stayed with them throughout the session.

This year the times had changed considerably. But Balzer was not alarmed. He rejoined his Democratic fellows and the Coalition and with the greatest aplomb began the job of heckling the LaFollette followers on the other side of the house.

In debate the other day he told liberally of his experiences with the Progressives, and when the latter showed evidences of resentment he promised to "tattle" on Phil LaFollette some more later in the session.

An affable, personable fellow, Balzer's one great and unending predilection is speech. He is the legislature's original Townsendar, may make things uncomfortable for his present teammates when the question of pension legislation comes along later in the session. To his friends he will discuss with gratified smiles suggestions which bantering colleagues make that he should run for governor next time. Balzer is one of the stand-out performers of the 64th session of the Wisconsin legislature.

Personal Health Talks

SUGAR IS SUGAR

One popular misapprehension which seems to be dying out is that honey is somehow more suitable than other sweets or sugars for persons who have diabetes. There is no ground for this notion. One with diabetes can assimilate cane sugar syrup or molasses or corn syrup or glucose quite as well as he can honey.

Cane sugar is sucrose. Milk sugar is lactose. Malt sugar is maltose. Grape sugar is glucose or dextrose. Sweet corn, onions and unripe potatoes also contain glucose. Another name for fructose is levulose. Levulose is commonly associated with glucose in plant juices, fruits and especially in honey. Honey generally contains one-fifth water and four-fifths sugar, and the sugar of honey consists of about equal parts of glucose and fructose (levulose), with a small amount of sucrose (cane sugar) sometimes. Honey has been used for sweetening medicines from the earliest times. That lingering tradition is the only reason for using honey rather than plain syrup made from cane sugar or corn syrup, so far as I can learn I beg the apirists to lay off this once, unless they have some definite scientific source or test to bring to my attention. It is not that I don't like honey, for I don't, but we can't let these misleading traditions go on forever, you know.

Let's say this for honey. If you like the stuff at all it is more wholesome, more healthful for you in my judgment, than is any manufactured sweet, with the possible exception.

Honestly, bee keepers, I hate to mention this, but candor and good faith compel that I acknowledge the nutritive value——of old fashioned molasses. The reason why I place honey high on the list of sweets or sweeteners is that honey contains more mineral matter than any other syrup or sugar with the exception of molasses. And old fashioned molasses, at any rate, contains a fair amount of vitamin B. There is no vitamin at all in honey according to Sherman and other authorities. But old fashioned molasses is hard to find nowadays. The product of modern sugar manufacture commonly sold as molasses contains sulphur dioxide which comes from the fumes of burning sulphur used for clarifying the juice of sugar cane, which is a dark colored mass when expressed from the cane. The modern molasses also contains considerable lime, which is added to the cane juice to neutralize nature's acidity and to facilitate evaporation of the dissolved matter. Old fashioned molasses was the untreated product left after boiling down and separation of the sugar.

Cow's or goat's milk contains 5 or 6 per cent of lactose, milk sugar. Formerly lactose, sugar of milk, was much used for modifying cow's milk for infant feeding, but in recent years other sugars have been widely exploited for this purpose, and not only physicians but mothers have acquired the notion that other sugars are better than milk sugar for one reason or another. There is little real evidence that milk sugar, cane sugar or corn syrup (glucose) is not quite as desirable in every way for the purpose.

An all-church birthday party will be given by Women's Union of First Baptist church for the congregation at 7:30 this evening in the recreation room of the church. Clippinger. Mrs. M. G. Fox is dinner chairman. Mrs. Stanley Gross will have charge of the dining room and Mrs. R. L. Swanson is ticket chairman. Friday night the Home-builders will be entertained at a progressive bridge party. The group will play contract and auction bridge, schafkopf and Chinese checkers at the homes of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Moore, 204 N. Drew street, and the Rev. and Mrs. Robert K. Bell, 216 N. Durkee street, and will go to the church for refreshments.

The Rev. I. E. Schlagenhaut, district superintendent of Appleton district of the Methodist church, will be the principal speaker at a father and son banquet at the Sturgeon Bay church Wednesday night. He will be in Fond du Lac Thursday and Friday for a conference plan and procedure committee meeting and will remain there Saturday for a cabinet meeting at which Bishop J. Ralph Magee of the St. Paul area and other district superintendents will be present.

Catholic churches in Appleton are having special requiem masses this week for the repose of the soul of Pope Pius XI. St. Joseph's church had its mass Monday morning. CONSTIPATION
SAPS YOUR AMBITION

You can't go out and win if constipation pulls your punches. It's often what you don't eat that hurts you. Ordinary diets often fail to supply "bulk" of the kind you need for regular elimination. Adopt an easy-to-follow rule that fosters regularity: eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN with milk or cream every day; drink plenty of water. ALL-BRAN helps in the formation of the soft "bulky" mass required for good elimination. And when your habits are "regular," you are ready to go places. ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

Another 'Doe Party'
In Competition With American Legion Stag
Phillips, Wis.—(4)—The ladies who had their "doe party" last year, with a "doe" "Tarzan" as the main attraction, will retaliate with another this week to spite husbands who are planning an American Legion stag.
"Meet Jean at the legion stag Thursday," the menfolks are advertising.
Not to be outdone, the ladies are urging one another to "step out Friday and meet the superman from Mars."
It all started last year when the American Legion post arranged a stag featuring "Sally." The women's auxiliary followed with a "doe party" starring a chest thumping high school athlete garbed in an animal skin, vertising.

Oppose Diversion of State Highway Funds

For the first time in history the highway users of Wisconsin have united, and in a recent conference unanimously adopted a resolution to support a constitutional amendment prohibiting the diversion of highway funds.

According to a statement issued by S. L. Foote, secretary of the Highway Users Conference of Wisconsin, a joint resolution introduced in the Wisconsin legislature proposes a constitutional amendment to prohibit the diversion of highway funds. The resolution provides that all motor vehicle fuel taxes, motor vehicle registration fees and licenses shall be set aside and used for constructing, reconstructing, maintaining and improving public highways and bridges only, including the necessary administrative costs.

Form Fine Arts Club
At Lawrence College

Twenty-eight Lawrence college students have organized a Fine Arts club for promotion of the study of architecture and art in and around Appleton.

Their first activity was to visit the Institute of Paper Chemistry for inspection of the offices, finished in California redwood and other interesting woods.

The club, which has no officers or constitution, will examine the Chinese art collection at the home of Miss La Tourette Stockwell, instructor in English, Wednesday. Visits to paper mills and inspections of art collections in other homes in this vicinity are planned.

From the logic of events we learn that selfishness and impurity alone are fleeting, and that wisdom will ultimately put asunder what she hath not joined together. Soul has infinite resources with which to bless mankind and happiness would be more readily attained and would be more secure in our keeping if sought in soul."

Wrong to Withhold Business Affairs From Wife, Dix Says

BY DOROTHY DIX
Dear Miss Dix—Should a man tell his wife everything? I have a good wife who has always worked hard to make a home for me and our three children. I think a great deal of her, but why should I tell her everything? I talk over my business and my plans with my parents and tell them what I do, but I never discuss my affairs with my wife. My wife has a very troubled look most of the time. She seems to think that she should have a knowledge of all my home and business affairs, but I do not consider it necessary. Do you?

CHARLES D.

Answer: Suppose, Mr. D., that you went into a partnership in which you invested everything you had. Suppose you put into it all of your money, all of your labor, all of your intelligence, all of your hopes and plans for the future. Wouldn't you think that you had a right to know everything that was being done in the business, and every move that your partner was making? If he kept you entirely in the dark and refused to give you any information, wouldn't you think that he wasn't giving you a square deal?

You know you would, and you would break up that partnership before you could say "cat." Well, that is exactly the way you are treating your wife. She is strictly with-in her rights when she wants to know all about your business affairs because they are her business affairs just as much as they are yours.

When she is a good and thrifty wife and makes you a comfortable home, she is holding up her end of the marriage partnership just as much as you are holding up yours. She is putting in just as many hours a day of labor as you are. She is striving as hard to make the domestic concern a going concern as you are. Her hopes and ambitions are centered in it just as much as are yours. If it fails, she goes down in the ruins as much as you do.

What's the great idea, anyway, about keeping your wife in ignorance about your business? Is she a fool without brains enough to form an intelligent opinion on any subject, or to understand a simple business proposition? Is she an indiscreet talker who would blab your business secrets? Is she a spender whose money burns in her pocket so that she would rush into extravagance every time you were a dollar ahead?

If your wife belongs to any of these types, you are justified in keeping her from all knowledge of your business, but not otherwise. And, believe me, Mr. D., you cut yourself out from a lot of help that you could get from your wife if you made her your confidential adviser.

For most women, even when they don't understand the technicalities of a business, have a curious insight into the very heart of a matter that often clarifies it for men, who have got befuddled considering all the different angles of it and weighing one side against the other. Also, women have hunches that are worth their husbands' playing. Their intuition about the characters of people and their trustworthiness is almost uncanny.

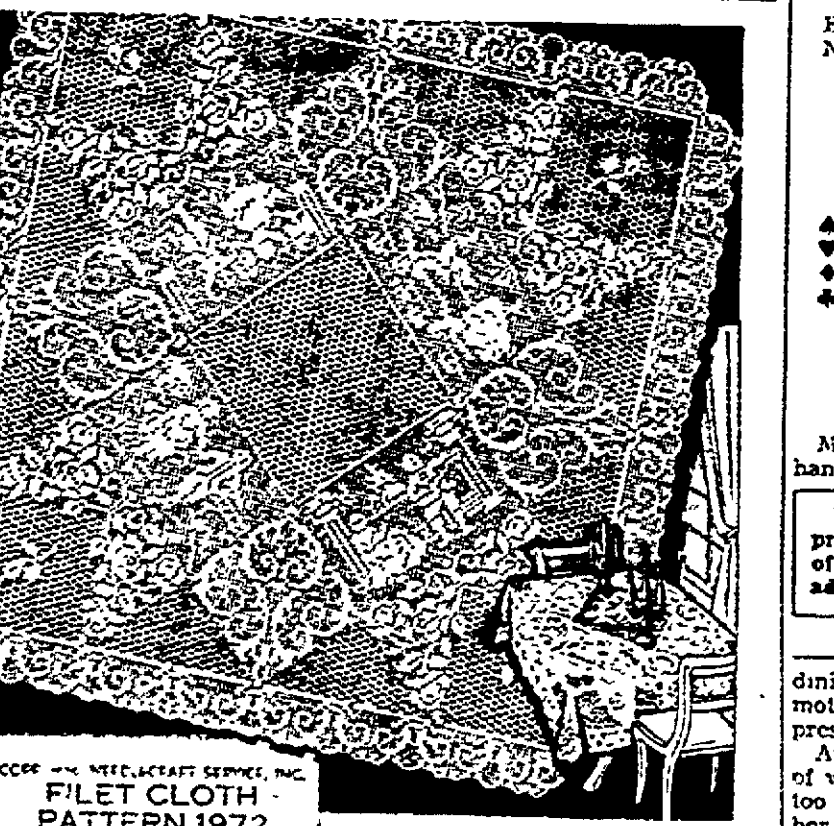

I know many big business men who never make a move without consulting their wives, and who rely more on their wives' judgment than they do on that of their expert advisers.

And how, Mr. D., is a wife to manage her part of the domestic finances if she knows nothing of her husband's affairs? How can she gauge her expenditures if she does not know whether he is making money or losing it?

I don't wonder that your wife looks troubled. If you refuse to make a confidante of her and if she knows that you talk over your affairs with your parents and not with her, she is bound to feel that you do not trust her. Also that you are utterly unjust to her. My wonder is that she stands it at all. You wouldn't if your partner treated you that way.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a university student in my first year in law school. I am very much in love with a young girl, but inasmuch as my college course will require three more years, it would not be possible for me to marry her for some time to come. In my home town there is a wealthy widow, several years my senior, who has often expressed a deep affection for me. She has offered to finance my college course with the im-

Learned by Asking About His Bad Bids

BY ELY CULBERTSON
One of the finest players I know today owes his skill to the fact that, when he was learning bridge, he begged his partners and adversaries to call his attention to his bad bids and misplays. The result is that today he makes virtually none of either. Of course, many of us do not take kindly to criticism, but this sort of thing is different. We should ask for it if we have high aspirations. How many players, for example, if they were given East's cards in the following deal, would know whether or not they had made a mistake in defense?

The bidding:
North East South West
1 heart 1 spade 2 clubs Pass
2 diamonds Pass 2 no trump Pass
3 no trump Pass Pass

Five clubs would have been a safer contract but, taking each bid individually, I am inclined to think that the three no trump contract actually taught was more persuasive.

West opened the spade eight to his partner's bid suit. Declarer held up his ace for one round, but took it on the spade continuation. Now, with South's only outside entry removed, things did not look so rosy, but noting that there was no hope of taking nine tricks without establishing the club suit, declarer simply had to rely on getting a favorable club distribution. He entered dummy with a heart to the queen and returned the club six. East quickly ducked and, by so doing, sealed his own doom. Declarer put in the ten spot and it was all over. West could not afford to hold up his jack. To do so would permit declarer to lead the ace, dropping East's king, and then play the queen, clearing up the entire suit. But having taken the jack, West could make no return that would win another trick for his side. Actually, he shifted to the diamond queen. Dummy won and a second club lead slaughtered East's king and permitted declarer to run five club tricks and claim the balance with dummy's heart and diamond honors.

Nothing was said by any player after the hand was over, and it is likely that none of them realized that the contract could have been decisively beaten. What is more, the play that would have led to this defeat was simply itself and should not have escaped the notice of any reasonably experienced defender. When the first club was led from dummy, all East had to do was put up the king! That simple little second hand high play would have squashed declarer's chances as though they had been steam rollers. Declarer could not afford to let the king hold the trick because, in that event, East would run off his established spades. But, on the other hand, declarer could not afford to take the trick because West then would have the suit stopped and, although declarer could cash the queen, he never would be able to reenter his own hand for the cashing of his three other clubs. It should have required no great imagination on East's part to have seen that the singly guarded king in his own hand was of no value unless his partner, West, had a subsidiary club stopper. If declarer had had the A-Q-J-K-x, East might as well play the king—whether he did or not would make no difference. But if declarer had a holding that would permit a ducking play into the West hand, retaining another club in dummy as a communication card, then the immediate play of the club king would be vital.

When a play can do no harm and may do good, it is by logic the correct play. Incidentally, of course, South could have made five clubs with ease but, as said above, this would have been a rather difficult contract to reach.

Answer: This would be a question of where. That is, if the city is not too large and the hotel is one which her family regularly patronizes, it is other hand, in a great city and in a strange hotel the propriety of permitting her to do this would be questioned by many.

Beauty and You

Too few men are the Romans they think they are—much to the disappointment of American girls!

Girls, here is your chance! I want you to write me what you like and dislike about the men you know! No names need to be mentioned but do tell me how the men you are acquainted with, measure up to your ideal!

During the past year we girls have come in for a good deal of blunt criticism by the finicky males, and I think it is about time we expressed our opinions about them! They criticize our figures, our grooming, our manners, our voices, our behavior. They like to tell us just how we should dress and how we should act. And we have taken it on the chin. Now let's turn the tables!

You must tell me frankly what you object to about the men you know. Criticize their grooming, their physiques, their manners, their voices! And also tell me what you admire! Let's get together and tell the world what the glamour man of 1939 should be like! How you want him to look and to act.

Leaflet Offered
After I read all your letters I will condense your preferences into a leaflet which will be offered free and which you can present to friend, husband, father or boyfriend the next time he begins to criticize you! We will give him a set of standards to live up to, just as he gives us.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University.

The real dikes which protect America from the destructive forces of both Communism and Fascism are purely psychological. But, too any otherwise intelligent Americans are permitting these dikes to crumble without lifting a finger to keep them in good condition. Wake up before it is too late!

CASE M-150: Today I'll continue the psychoanalysis of the church. Modern clergymen need more education in the physical and social sciences, in addition to their Old Testament history and theology.

Christ made very few prayers during his 3-year ministry. He went about DOING GOOD, the Bible tells us. He healed the sick and fed the hungry. He rendered psychiatric advice and treatment, even handling the insane patients, as on his visit to the Gadarenes.

He was a past master of the psychology of the public platform. He employed analogies and simple language which his audience could well understand.

As a criminal lawyer he would have been preeminent, for he could confound his critics and tie them up in forensic knots. Nor did he rely on spooky auditoriums with dim lights and ritualistic bric-a-brac. He thrilled them out in the sunlight.

He started the first church picnic dark red nail polish. I have noticed, however, that many of the other teachers use red nail polish and I think that this may be the reason I have been having so much trouble convincing my girls. And now I am very self-conscious about saying anything more because I don't want to criticize my colleagues for using what they apparently approve. A word of advice from you, as well as your opinion of red nail polish, would be of immeasurable help.

Answer: I agree that you can not possibly criticize the other teachers. The point for you to stress is difference in age: what is proper for a grown person is not necessarily proper for a schoolgirl. If the nails of the teachers are not extreme, you can at least be free to call attention to blood-red or grape-purple color and to the revoltingly clawlike effect on a woman's hands when it is brought over the edge of the nail. You might perhaps create your best influence by having your own nails very beautifully done, with moons and tips showing and with enough color so that by contrast with the other teachers they will be much more attractive and yet not look like any protest against nail polish. In other words, plain white manicured nails could hardly attract the girls who like the garishness of red ones.

Send your children, or better yet, take them to Sunday school. Urge them to develop those essential rules of unselfishness and brotherly love which alone guarantee the liberty we enjoy under this democracy.

As Psychologist and educator, I tell you readers that the Sunday school is the real hope of America. Get behind it, therefore, and see that more than 49 per cent of our citizens receive some moral instruction.

Send your children, or better yet, take them to Sunday school. Urge them to develop those essential rules of unselfishness and brotherly love which alone guarantee the liberty we enjoy under this democracy.

And send me a long, self-addressed envelope with 6 cents postage thereon if you wish my bulletin entitled "THE PSYCHOLOGY OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION" for it shows how to solve this Sunday school problem in America.

Dr. Crane will give personal attention to questions on psychological problems. Write him, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope for reply letters and readers' names are never published.

Mistake to Allow Children To Have Their Own Way—Patri

BY ANGELO PATRI
Children love their parents, their mothers in particular, in spite of the trials and tribulations they may endure together. The togetherness is what is important, and it has to be spiritual as well as physical. Mere housing is not true togetherness. There must be something more, the inner relationship that exists naturally between the mother and the children. Where this exists it holds against all strains and stresses of daily living.

Some mothers are afraid to deal wisely with their children because they are afraid the children will not love them if they cross them in any way. Even when they know that the children are getting into lax ways, or habits that will in time handicap them, they hold back, letting, "He wants to," decide the matter.

This is not only a grave mistake of judgment, it is a sin against childhood. Children must depend upon the wisdom and good sense of their parents. They are not born with the knowledge and the understanding of life that enables people to live comfortably and successfully in society. That knowledge has to be gained by long years of service to a standard of behavior, and through the experiences that such service gives them.

In their early years they do not know enough to feed themselves, take care of their health, or use their opportunities for learning. All this must be directed by the mothers and fathers.

Children are a bundle of wants. Their wanting is what drives them to learning. If their wants are selected wisely the learning is valuable. If it is undirected and wilful it is wasteful and injurious. Take the list of wants a three-year-old child expresses in a day. He wants or he doesn't want all experiences that touch him.

He wants to get a strange dog. He wants a handful of lollipops. He wants the cat's tail, the grocery boy's cart, the police man's hat, a drink of milk, a pail and shovel, a ride in the car, mother to play with him, granny's specs. He does not want his hands washed for lunch. He does not want his egg. He wants to eat with his fingers. He wants to share granny's coffee. He wants to get up and run about the house and come back to the table for occasional mouthfuls. He wants to nap. He does not want to go to bed for it. Mother must hold him. He wants to see who rang the bell. He wants to know what is in the bundle he wants to open it all by himself although it is the family wash.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE HOME

Marie Schneider's Tested Recipes

Only
In many households women wonder how they may utilize the egg yolks left from the making of an angel food cake or other white cake in which large quantities of egg whites are used.

When you have made a white cake in which egg whites have been used you may make a most luscious lemon filling or if you prefer a more tart filling a lemon butter will use up three or more egg yolks in a satisfying manner. If you have grown slightly weary of the cakes frosted with a sweet fluffy frosting, these fillings will be doubly welcome. Gold Cup Cakes afford an excellent opportunity to use more egg yolks.

One must not assume that egg yolks are to be used in desserts only. Try Hollandaise Sauce. It is an excellent way to use egg yolks and is delicious served with vegetables such as cauliflower, broccoli and artichokes.

Toasted Nut Filling
4 tablespoons 4 egg yolks
sugar 1 teaspoon
1 tablespoon vanilla
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup rich milk
1 cup cornstarch
Mix the sugar, cornstarch and salt together. Add the milk and cook 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Stir in the egg yolks which have been slightly beaten, and cook in double boiler until thick and creamy. Add vanilla. Add the chopped nuts and cool before spreading between layers of cake.

Lemon Butter
1 cup sugar 2 tablespoons butter
Dash of salt
3 egg yolks
Juice and grated rind of 1 lemon
Combine all the ingredients and cook over hot water until the sugar is dissolved and the mixture slightly thickened, cool. Spread thickly between layers of cake. Dust the top of the cake with confectioners' sugar or reserve a part of the filling to fold into whipped cream for covering the top before serving.

Gold Cup Cakes
1 cup butter 2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup sugar 1 cup milk
4 egg yolks 1 cup milk
beaten Grated rind of 1 lemon
Cream butter, add sugar gradually and cream until light. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add to creamed mixture and beat well. Sift flour and baking powder together and add alternately with milk. Add lemon rind and turn into well greased deep cup cake pans. Bake in a moderately hot oven 400 degrees F. When cold hollow out and fill with either lemon butter or toasted nut filling mixed with whipped cream.

Hollandaise Sauce
1 cup butter Yolks of 2 eggs
1 tablespoon 1 teaspoon salt
lemon juice
Wash butter, divide into 3 pieces, put one piece in a sauce pan over a larger one containing boiling water and stir constantly with a wire whisk. Add second piece of butter and as it thickens third piece. Remove from fire, and add salt. If left over fire a moment too long it will separate.

My Neighbor Says—
Save the yolks of the eggs you use in angel-food cakes for making Spanish cream. Then serve the two together as a dessert for luncheon or dinner.

Boiled potatoes are often water because they are allowed to stand in water after they are cooked. As soon as they are tender when tested with a fork, drain and shake them for a minute over a low fire.

For cleaning bed springs, use a dish mop on which a little furniture polish has been placed.

Peter Mallone: An adventurous young Englishman.
Petronella: His sister, and staunch supporter.

Yesterday, Peter and Petronella started the rounds of the newspaper offices without success.

Chapter Three Opportunity
Petronella, I blamed herself bitterly. Deep down she had known this would happen. As soon as she read those stilted, self-conscious little articles, over which Peter had tried so hard. He wrote much better than that, in his scribbled diary. She brushed tears off her eyes. That Air Mail letter, crawling meekly to father, agreeing that they would both come out to Burma, was as good as written, and posted. Peter had the offer of a steady job. She, the chance of accompanying him, of being spoiled, and having the time of her life in a country where there were more men than women. Where even competition from girls like Molly wouldn't worry you very much. Father said she would be out every night.

It might not be so bad. If she did not fall in love and marry, as father wanted. Aunt Maisie had promised her that she could come home and train for a career; that the "Forest House" should be her home, if she needed it. Looking at like all the rest, he'll do it accompanied by sound advice.

"Perhaps he won't! Perhaps he'll give you a chance! Peter, this is exciting!"

They sat on the edges of chairs, in the outer office. The room was full of people, machines, desks, files. There was perpetual coming and going, and telephoning. No one took the slightest notice of them.

Gradually, Petronella's hot hands cooled, and her panic subsided into a icy apprehension. They could see a dark blur, shadowed against frosted glass, on the door marked "News Editor." They heard the rumble of voice which belonged to Martin Rowdon, and his visitor. It began to look unlikely that she would ever see him. In a moment they would be told to go away.

But, abruptly, the door was thrown open, and he was standing there. He was a hearty man, with a large head, nearly white hair, and fine eyes, that seemed to find her amusing.

"Under Your Very Nose"
"Now you two! Come along in. Sorry to have kept you waiting. Never become a journalist, my dear. It's a terrible life."

"I shouldn't be any good," agreed Petronella hastily, lest he should think that she, too, was looking for a job.

He glanced at her a second time, and smiled. His eyes complimented her, as if, telling her that he thought she might do very much better than become a newspaper writer.

Watch Expenditures to Curb Taxes, Reynolds Tells Club

Neenah — Public expenditures, not taxes, should be the real concern of the taxpayers, Paul N. Reynolds, executive director of the Wisconsin Taxpayers alliance, told members of the Neenah club in a talk Monday noon at the club rooms.

"Taxes are important, but the cause of taxes is of greater importance," Reynolds said. "To attempt to remedy the tax situation without first providing for a sane system and level of public expenditures is as bad as getting the cart before the horse."

If farmers, laborers, bankers, small business men or big business men expect to receive any relief from high taxes, they will have to take an active interest in county, state and federal affairs as well as in local affairs, Reynolds asserted. In an explanation of the state budget, he pointed out that Governor Heil's recommendations for the 2-year period beginning July 1 and ending June 30, 1941 totals $66,750,000.

Need New Taxes "Although this figure is $29,800,000 less than the amount demanded by the various departments, excluding relief, it is only about $4,000,000 less than the appropriation for the present biennium. It will be necessary to levy about $21,500,000 in taxes in addition to regular receipts from tax laws now in force in order to balance the government's budget," Reynolds said.

Some laws now in force were adopted as temporary expedients and will expire on June 30. Those laws included 21 per cent privilege dividend tax, the 60 per cent surtax on individual incomes and the chain store taxes. Even if these tax laws are reenacted, it still will be necessary to levy about $14,200,000 in new taxes plus any additional amounts which the state may appropriate for relief."

That the Tuchscherer Shoes team of the Menasha Catholic Men's league established some sort of a consistency record in the kegging Monday night. The team rolled games of 887, 888 and 885 and dropped three to the Broadway No. 2 team. The 885 score did tie the third game rolled by the Broadway team but the Shoe team lost the game in the extra frame. The three defeats put the Shoe team within one game of the league cellar.

MovieLand Its People and Products

By Jimmie Fidler

Hollywood—Sometimes, I'm almost tempted to believe that those Ritz zannies aren't as screwy as they try to appear. Witness, for example, the cunning with which they have succeeded in putting Darryl Zanuck, who's something of a diplomat himself, squarely on the spot regarding their forthcoming picture, "The Gorilla." As you know, Harry, Al and Jimmy refused to do the picture—walked out in fact. Zanuck immediately suspended them and threatened to sue them for the money already spent on the production—something like $200,000. The Ritzes gave in, returned to work—and everyone wondered what they gained by their week-end rebellion.

The answer is—plenty! They have succeeded in putting their opinion of "The Gorilla" on record. They've said, in effect, that the story isn't worth screening and that they are not to be blamed if the finished picture turns out to be a dismal flop. More important, they've forced Zanuck to go on record. He's publicly declared that "The Gorilla" is a worthwhile vehicle. By publicizing the controversy, the Ritz Brothers have forced Zanuck to throw every studio resource behind that picture, for he dare not let it be a lemon now.

In the ordinary course of events, "The Gorilla" would have been just another glorified "B" production, occupying very little of Zanuck's attention. Now it

Ickes Debate on Freedom of Press Has Its Good Points

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—This running debate with Harold Ickes on the freedom of the press is going to be good for the American press and for the country, as well. It will emphasize the faults of the press and the tricks and insincerities of statesmen and politicians, too, and the people, being apprised of wrongs on both sides, through these mutual recriminations, will bear down with the pressure of their will and compel more tidy behavior all around.

The criticism of the press should come from the press itself, but, although we are nicer now than ever before and the best press in the world, if that means anything, self-criticism, except in mediation, never is completely frank. You try hitting yourself on the chin with all your might and you will find that at the instant of the impact, as they say in golf, you will pull the punch. Not even Joe Louis, great hitter that he is, can hit himself hard enough to loosen a tooth or score a knockdown. Hitting someone else is another matter and the press can rip and tear with complete abandon and, also, with complete honesty, in attacking evils outside itself. In his own thoughts a man may express very harsh opinions of himself but something in human nature prevents his saying publicly, "I am a louse." And I doubt that the house dick of the New Deal, in his private thoughts, approves himself as heartily as he does in public. If he does, he is an ego-maniac.

Harold can't see it that way, but he is in the same position as the press. It just isn't possible for him to belt the New Deal for its faults, or himself for his, as hard as he belts the press, even though they be apparent to him in his private reflections. Moreover, in criticizing the press, he resorts to the same practices that he condemns in the press. For example, he has pleaded guilty to two "over statements" in his debate with Frank Gannett but did not bear down on the fact that he, like the press, has a duty to check his information, particularly when it is delivered in malice as these two "over statements" were. And, although he accuses the press of undue zest in refuting his "over-statements" his position as a party to the row disqualifies him as a judge of the permissible degree of zest.

Opinion In Magazine Not Necessarily Gospel

He also quotes, as gospel, the opinion of Time magazine that a cigarette story which was widely used but also widely disused, was likely "to scare the life out of tobacco manufacturers and make tobacco users' flesh creep." Is there some special quality in Time magazine which makes its off-hand opinions unassailable or does Ickes credit this opinion merely because it serves his purpose in debate? After all, Time, too, is of the press which he assails generally, and its back cover this week is devoted to an ad for Camels and he was just saying that the advertiser's money gives him an editorial power in the press. As for the accuracy of Time's opinion in this case, I am smoking a cigarette at this moment although I have read now and then, for years, medical articles about the effect of tobacco on the heart, throat and lungs and was hammered with lectures by itinerant reformers on the pernicious coffin-nail when I was young.

He doesn't prove that this story would make tobacco users' flesh creep or deter them from smoking, and I submit that this press opinion on which he places so much reliance falls in the category which he condemns as the work of "loose-writing individuals." Yet, he likes it fine.

Editors' Problems Of Space, Judgment Vary

The face that the cigarette story, although widely used, also was widely disused, he interprets as censorship by the advertiser against the public health. But it was fearfully described in a magazine which carries cigarette copy and other editors which put it in the spike have thought nothing more sinister than "What the hell, everybody knows cigarette aren't good for you." It certainly wasn't good news. One editor edits Time magazine. Another edits a daily in South Bend, or Rutland. Their problems of space and their editorial judgment vary.

Ickes has sounded off in two big blunts. This week, one in Collier's the other on the air before a radical organization of lawyers. It is impossible to answer both in one piece, and I expect to talk back further from day to day on the points he raises.

But, in closing today, how do you like this declaration from Ickes' story in Collier's:—"Congress ought to make it possible for the president to veto any extraneous provision that is not germane to a bill." That proposal to let the president rewrite laws after they have passed congress, changing them to suit himself, comes right in the middle of a hot denial that the reorganization bill was intended to give him dictatorial power.

Can you picture what Mr. Roosevelt would do with the right to "veto any extraneous provision that is not germane" in his own opinion, "to a bill" after it has left congress?

YOU can always make a better swap in a hoss deal when the other feller's got too many of them. That's just hoss sense. And it goes for Used Cars as well as horses!

Today most automobile dealers in and around Appleton have more used cars than they can conveniently handle. They want to sell and they want to sell fast.

Dealers are overstocked. Show rooms are jammed, fender to fender, with good Used Cars in every price range!

Prices are at "rock bottom" . . . it's clearance time!

Here's the reason: Every autumn during the past few years automobile manufacturers have moved new car showings ahead a few weeks. The 1937 models were displayed in November. The 1938 cars were shown in October. A tremendous wave of new-car buying in the Fall has been the result.

Now nine out of every ten cars are bought on a trade. Hundreds of people in the Appleton area traded in good automobiles for new models last Fall. Consequently dealers' stocks swelled and swelled.

They took these Used Cars into their shops replaced any defective parts, raised them to mechanical peaks of comfort, safety and dependability. Then they put them on the market. . . .

There are no shirkers in the Lawrence A cappella choir, as these pictures taken at a recent rehearsal testify. Competition is keen, and out of the 200 students who tried out for the organization last fall, only about 70 make up the present choir. Focusing all their attention on Dean Carl J. Water-

Curtain Call Gives Successful Presentation of 'Stolen Fruit'

A PLEASANT interlude in the class routine for students of Appleton High school was the presentation of "Stolen Fruit," a 1-act comedy centering around Plymouth colony, by Curtain Call dramatic organization, Monday during the assembly period. This was the group's first public performance, and it successfully proved that members were capable of the name they selected this fall. A delighted audience called the cast back for a "curtain call."

The gay and reckless mood of the comedy was skillfully sustained with a fast tempo and well-pointed lines. The art of the 1-act drama as well as the ability of the players was demonstrated by the compact plot, the rapid action, the swift etching of character.

The scene of the play is the rude colonial interior of Miles Standish's kitchen in the year 1622. "No one is interested in anything here except corn," complains astute Aunt Resolute (played by Martha Wells) to Mrs. Standish (Alice McCarter) and demure Miriam (Audrey Lemmen).

But the tempestuous Rose, ably interpreted by Mary Bob Knapp, contributes some excitement as she alternately teases and storms at sober young John (Robert Schneider), who loves her very much, and her own impetuous brother, Philippe, portrayed by Lawrence Hintz. Rose finds someone of her own mettle, however, when Garrett Foster, a young dare-devil, breaks in upon her with an arm load of stolen corn. Since robbing corn fields is a crime punished by flogging, in the stern Plymouth colony, Garrett (Jack Lally) demands and gets protection from her. In spite of Rose's painstaking efforts to conceal him, Standish (Jack Bradley) discovers him in the chimney corner.

Collective Security Based On Monroe Doctrine Urged at Pan-American League Meeting

PAN-AMERICAN collective security based on the Monroe Doctrine was presented as the ideal to be striven for in these unsettled times by Dr. Richard Cummings, assistant professor of history at Lawrence college, in a talk on the Monroe Doctrine before the Pan-American League Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. T. E. Orblison, 214 S. Rankin street.

Drawing an analogy between the problems confronting the United States 113 years ago, when the Monroe Doctrine was formulated, and the situation today, the speaker pointed out that the war which began in 1914 was not the only world war, for the Napoleonic wars which raged from 1795 to 1815, with the exception of two years of peace, were also world wars. When at Vienna a peace treaty was drawn up, the current thought was absolutism, he said, not democracy as at Versailles 100 years later, but, he continued, like the treaty of Versailles it was successful only on paper. Dr. Cummings told of the revolts in Greece, Spain and Portugal in the interests of democracy which were put down, Spain during the conflict had lost her colonies, and when the question arose whether the absolutist governments should help her win them back, whether ships should be sent to the new democratic governments on this side of the water to coerce them to return to the rule of Spain, the Monroe Doctrine was promulgated.

Adams Fought Pact
England because of trade advantages proposed to President Monroe that the Spanish colonies remain free and that England and the United States pledge themselves to see to it that they should, and after consulting with ex-presidents Jefferson and Madison, it was decided that such an agreement be made, but John Quincy Adams, a cabinet member, opposed the move so strongly that the United States did not enter the agreement.

Meanwhile President Monroe formulated his own statement to the effect that any attempt by European powers to extend their form of government to any part of this continent would be considered a danger to our safety and would not be tolerated. Since the danger of interference here was over at the moment the Monroe Doctrine was not of vital importance nor did it cause a great stir at the time, Dr. Cummings said, but he pointed out that its importance is in the fact that it upheld the policy of Washington of avoiding foreign entanglements and built up our governmental policy for a century to come.

Opposes Expansion
The speaker said that the question at present is, Shall we now, in the present European struggle, reverse the policy and subscribe to the idea of "collective security" or alliance with England and France against the Fascist countries. He expressed the belief that the Monroe Doctrine aims to make this hemisphere safe for democracy, but to try to extend that to Europe does not comport with the policy we have adhered to up to this time. Dr. Cummings pointed out how the Monroe Doctrine has operated in the past to keep this hemisphere safe for democracy and told of the Roosevelt corollary to the Monroe Doctrine in 1902, the Clark memorandum in 1928 and the repeal of the Platt amendment in 1934.

A more constructive policy than the old one of intervention has been developing, the speaker stated, a realization of the necessity for joint responsibility. The idea of collective action has been promoted more and more in the Pan-American movement with a declaration of continental solidarity against outside interference.

Your Birthday

"AQUARIUS"
If February 15 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.; from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m.; from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

If you fail to place a high value on your time this day is apt to be spent in an unprofitable manner. Don't put your eggs in one basket or try to do anything in a hurry. Through thoughtlessness many people are likely to be seriously inconvenienced. It might be well to remember a telephone call can often prevent a waste of time. It will be exceedingly poor judgment to expect anyone to anticipate your thoughts or needs this day, so it will be advisable to make them known without hesitation. Emergency cases frequently require drastic measures, and should any arise, it might be well to resort to them. This is a day when plain speaking probably will accomplish far more than mincing words, providing it is done tactfully. Married and engaged couples, and those dreaming of a honeymoon to-

YOUNGSTERS BUSY WITH VALENTINE SHOPPING

Probably trying to decide between lovely lay sentiments and hard-boiled pleas to the effect that "You Give Me a Pain in the Neck, but be My Valentine Anyway," Carol and Jimmie Reeder were among the youngsters who crowded the stores yesterday to do their last-minute Valentine shopping. Their little sister, Lois Anne, although a bit too young to know much about cupid's darts, looks on with bright-eyed interest. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Reeder, 1751 N. Division street. (Post-Crescent Photo) gether, should consult each other before making any plans.

If a woman and February 15 is your birthday, you have, most likely, a forgiving disposition that will save you from many breaches of friendship. As long as you do not undertake to reform your friends or business associates, you are apt to retain your popularity. You can develop a degree of gracefulness that ought to win for you many commendations, especially if you have any histrionic aspirations. You seem to be due to have a very pleasant surprise. Never let sentimentality interfere with your sense of right and wrong, for it might be trying to make a compromise that trouble will come to you. Through some artistic, literary, political or a specialized line of commercial work your future may be assured. Your matrimonial prospects indicate that you will have the wisdom and ability to make a success of your married life.

The child born on February 15, should, from its earliest years, be taught the meaning and importance of practicing moderation. Having an extremely enthusiastic nature, many of its mistakes may be traceable to an excess of ardor. Success in life, however, will be due to zeal and capability.

If a man and February 15 is your natal day, confusion probably annoys you, a quiet atmosphere being essential for you to do advantageous intellectual work. Building, promoting, selling, technical work, acting, writing, painting or a line of endeavor requiring skillful hands may win for you a reputation and a handsome nest egg.

What's New at the Library

To further its campaign to eradicate syphilis in the community, the auxiliary to the Appleton Junior Chamber of Commerce has presented the Appleton Public Library with four authoritative books on the subject. One is "Ten Million Americans Have It" by S. William Becker, M. D., a book that treats the disease not as the mark of an immoral person but much the same as any other common disease, such as tuberculosis, pneumonia or influenza. Dr. Becker discusses the great campaign against syphilis which has recently been launched in this country and exposes many common fallacies and errors in regard to the disease.

Dr. Morris Fishbein is the author of another of the volumes, "Syphilis, the Next Great Plague to Go." Written for the layman, it avoids complicated technical terms, doesn't deal with the distant history of the dread ill and treats the subject calmly and factually from the point of view of definite questions the average reader wants answered.

"Syphilis, Gonorrhea and the Public Health," by Nels A. Nelson and Gladys L. Crain, both of the division of genitoinfectious diseases of the Massachusetts department of Public Health, presents not only the essential known facts concerning syphilis and gonorrhea, but also gives an account of the development of control programs to date and discusses the direction they are taking. "Shadows on the Land—Syphilis," by Thomas Parran, M. D., surgeon general of the United States public health service, is the fourth book in the group.

Persons interested in public affairs will find "The American Politician," edited by J. T. Salter, to their liking. Recently received at the public library, it should be especially interesting to Wisconsin residents, as several of the 19 men prominent in American political life are described therein as from Wisconsin among them Robert M. La Follette, Jr., Sol Levitan and Mayor Dan Hoan of Milwaukee. Included are also first-hand sketches of Fiorello La Guardia, Paul V. McNutt, George W. Norris, John L. Lewis and Norman Thomas.

Both newspapermen and newspaper readers will be interested in George Seides new book, "Lords of the Press," which will be ready for circulation soon at the library. The book presents an unsparring analysis of the owners of the leading newspapers in the country, their personalities, policies and practices. Seides calls them the most powerful anonymous group of men in America.

"We Are Forty and We Did Get Jobs" is the encouraging title of another of the new books at the library. Its authors, C. E. Thompson and M. L. Wise, went after jobs for 10 weeks, in large cities, in medium-sized cities and in small towns, and got them—everything from service and selling jobs to positions in department stores, doctors' offices and public utilities. In the campaign they worked out a job-getting formula that they regard as almost unbeatable. Their story was printed in the Saturday Evening Post after which they were deluged with so many letters of inquiry that they published a book giving more details.

A historical document that reads with the sweep of a novel is "The Rape of Palestine," by William E. Ziff, a world authority on Zionism. The author reveals why Palestine was returned to the Jews in 1918, the sinister forces behind the Arab riots, Britain's stake and purpose

Melvin Nice Wanedr. Chinese checkers were played. A daughter was born recently to Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Hilker.

In the holy land, why the Zionist movement faces collapse and the stake of the United States in Palestine.

Of especial interest to highway engineers is "American Highways and Roadways," by Jac L. Gubbels. The author is landscape engineer for the Texas Highway department, and under his influence the highways of Texas have been developed until they are recognized as models throughout the nation. The book tells how the scientific modern highway—the beautifully planned, ditchless roads where you can run an automobile off at a 30-degree angle, cross the "cradle-rocker" drain and strike the fence without danger of turning over—is located, designed and constructed. There are 62 illustrations.

A cook's tour and gourmet trip to the best sectional kitchens in America is described in the book "Through the Kitchen Door," another of the new arrivals at the public library. Its authors, Grace and Beverly Smith and Charles Morrow Wilson, went on a culinary journey all over America in an automobile, collecting recipes from the housewives and natives whose cooking has become a tradition in each section of the country.

MacDowell Chorus Begins Drive for Associate Members

The annual campaign for associate members of Appleton MacDowell Male chorus opened this morning, following an announcement by the business manager, E. John Goodrich, at rehearsal last night. Associate membership cards were distributed to the active members after the rehearsal.

The campaign plan this year will be the same as in previous years. Anyone purchasing an associate membership ticket is entitled to two reserved seats for the annual spring concert of the chorus. Those who held associate memberships last year will be contacted first and given an opportunity to renew their cards before soliciting new members, as last year Lawrence Memorial chapel was sold out seven weeks before the concert and no more tickets were available.

The spring concert which is the first annual concert of the club will be given Tuesday, April 18, at the chapel. A guest artist will appear with the chorus.

Big Ten Race Narrowed to 3

Indiana, Ohio State and Purdue Draw Title Consideration

CHICAGO—(7)—The Big Ten basketball race apparently had narrowed down today to Indiana, league leader, Ohio State and Purdue—the only three teams which have lost less than three games.

The Hoosiers racked up their fifth straight victory last night, Chicago's cellar-dwelling Maroons being the victim, 46 to 33. Purdue blasted Minnesota out of the title picture, for the time being at least, with a 30 to 20 decision.

Northwestern continued to display an improved team in winning over Wisconsin, 37 to 27, and Illinois dumped Michigan farther into second division with a 35 to 23 victory.

Six Out of Seven
Indiana's triumph was its sixth in seven league games and gave the Hoosiers another boost toward the title, with Northwestern and Iowa their next opponents. Ohio State was idle, thereby hanging on to second place in front of Illinois and Purdue, tied for third.

Illinois and Minnesota have dropped three games apiece and have only an outside chance to regain a contending position in the championship race.

The hapless Chicago team gave Indiana a stiff fight all the way, trailing by only two points with five minutes to play. But at this point the visitors poured four field goals through the hoop and won going away.

Purdue was especially impressive in holding the Gophers to a scant 20 points. Gordon Addington, forward, taking high point honors for the losers with only eight counters. The Boilermakers, last season's champion, have jumped from a tie for ninth place to a tie for third place in eight days.

All three of the top-ranking contenders face second division opposition Saturday. Indiana entertains a dangerous Northwestern team, Ohio State takes on Iowa at home and Purdue plays at Wisconsin. The other week-end game brings together Michigan and Chicago on the latter's home floor.

Northwestern in 37-27 Win Over Badger Quintet
Melchoir Paces Wildcats To Fourth Big Ten Cage Victory
EASTON, Ill. (7)—Northwestern, hitting its stride after a miserable start in the big ten cage race, racked up its fourth victory in a row last night with a 37 to 27 decision over Wisconsin.

The Wildcats, paced by Chuck Melchoir, forward, found the hoop consistently in the first half to run up a comfortable 18-6 lead at intermission. The Badgers cut this margin to seven points early in the second period but never could get closer.

The triumph was Northwestern's fourth in seven conference games and Wisconsin's fifth loss in seven contests.

Melchoir was the offensive star with 14 points. Dave Dupce and Andy Smith of Wisconsin accounted for ten points each.

Wisconsin—G. T. P. Dupece 10, Smith 10, Bell 10, Timmerman 10, Strain 10, Walden 10, Gallagher 10, Anderson 10.

Northwestern—G. T. P. Melchoir 14, Dupce 10, Smith 10, Bell 10, Timmerman 10, Strain 10, Walden 10, Gallagher 10, Anderson 10.

Free throws missed: Dupce, Smith, Strain, Gallagher, Melchoir, Volts, Keble.

Officials: Dick Bray (Xavier), Carl Burt (Manchester).

Off-Delayed Game To be Played at Neenah Tonight

Outcome of N. E. W. Conference Race Hinges on Tilt With Shawano

NEENAH—At long last, the championship Neenah-Shawano basketball game will be played with the league-leading Indians finally invading Neenah at 8 o'clock tonight.

The crucial game in which the championship of the Northeastern Wisconsin conference is at stake, has been postponed twice by Shawano. The game originally was scheduled for Friday night, but in the afternoon Shawano called it off because of icy highway conditions. The game was shifted to Saturday night, but again Shawano called it off early in the afternoon. Tonight's battle was agreed upon Monday afternoon.

Undoubtedly, the delays will have some effect upon the players but there is little doubt that the conflict will be charged with an intense feeling because of the postponements, resulting in probably the most hard-fought contest in the conference this season. The fact that the conference title may be decided only can increase the importance of the game.

Indians Undefeated
A victory for Neenah practically will assure them of at least a share of the crown, while a win for the Indians will clinch the title for them.

Because of the delays, Neenah faces a handicap. The Rockets oppose a strong Menasha St. Mary quintet Friday night which won't give them much chance for reconditioning after the strenuous clash tonight. Then the Rockets will have a week before they face Clintonville and another week before the Menasha game, but within a few days Neenah enters the tournament at Menasha.

Coach Ole Jorgensen hasn't been able to do much relative to practice sessions with his cagers since Friday. The Neenah five tangled with the Draheims of the Neenah league Friday night. A light drill was held yesterday afternoon.

Jorgensen probably will assign Hackstock and Peterson at forwards, Schmidt at center and Hesselman and W. Kettering at guards. Gottschalk and Cooper probably will cover forward jobs for Shawano. Schweers at center and Reed and Rosenow at guards.

Holyoke, Mass.—Tommy Bland, 148, Toronto, drew with Jimmy Leto, 147, Hartford, Conn., (10).

New York—Al Reid, 128 1/2, New York, outpointed Jimmy Lancaster, 130 1/2, Wilmington, Del., (8).

ANNOUNCES TRADE
Chicago—(7)—George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears, announced last night he had traded Harold Roose, back, obtained in the draft from the University of Idaho, to Cleveland for Bob Snyder, fleet halfback formerly of Ohio university.

Earlier Halas announced the acquisition of Billy Patterson, Baylor university passing star, from Pittsburgh for Sam Francis, Bear fullback.

at other stops on the circuit. Billy Conn and Ired Apostol, did such a thorough job of cursing each other Friday night, Referee Frank Fullam had to keep reminding them to "remember them mikes, boys."

Henry Armstrong, the only fighter in history to hold three world's titles at the same time, is going shooting again. If plans go through for a Pedro Montanez bout March 31, Henry will try for another mark by defeating his welterweight crown three times in one month.

He has championship ship titles already booked with Bobby Pacho in Havana March 3 and Frankie Wallace in St. Louis, March 16. . . . the pro grid magnates would think better of the idea of electing Jim Farley czar at $75,000 per if someone would tell them where the $75,000 is coming from. Twelve of the 14 pitchers on the Cincinnati roster stand six feet or taller in their levi's.

Goodfellowship Abounds When Elks Bowlers Take to The Drives

Goodfellowship abounds when Elks league bowlers take to the drives and a good time is always had by all. Elks pinners are divided into three leagues with the Western loop performing Wednesday nights and the Eastern and Dix Ten circuits pumping away at the pins Friday nights.

Though comradeship and amusement are the keynotes, the men have their serious moments and there's nothing they'd rather do than put that pill into the pocket for a strike or clean up a split. A Post-Crescent photographer caught some of the boys bearing down during matches last week and the accompanying pictures are the result.

Framed in the top of the pin at the right is David Smith who might be wondering how he got "lapped." Smith has a scratch average of 148.4 and gets more exercise than he does pins. John Hantschel, the man behind the pipe, might be trying to stare the pins down for it seems he's having trouble toppling them any other way. He averages 142.3.

Judge F. V. Heinemann was striving with every muscle of his body, including those of his tongue, when he grooved one down the alley. We don't know whether it helped any and we certainly hope he didn't bite his food-faster when the photographer flashed his bulb. The judge is hitting 158.3.

Clockwise from Judge Heinemann is John Voigt who has his eyes glued on the ball as it takes its toll of pins. Johnny has a 147.1 average.

John Balliet comes next and it doesn't look like he was any too pleased with his efforts. Who knows, John, maybe it was nailed to the floor. Balliet has been bowling for a good many years and his current average is 152.8.

Harry Rotter is the gentleman with his hands on his knees who is much concerned with the course his ball may, or may not, be taking. When victory is at stake, it sometimes takes "years" for the ball to travel the length of the alley and that may be Rotter's situation for it looks like he's set for a long wait. Rotter has been thumping at a good clip and now has an average of 167.7 pins. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Record Entry List Is Predicted for Elks Bowling Meet

350 Teams Expected to Compete in State Pin Tourney Here

A RECORD shattering entry list is expected for the twenty-seventh annual Elks State Bowling tournament to be held at the Appleton Elks club alleys March 19 to April 23. The record up to this year is 275 teams while the 1938 tourney may attract 350 squads.

Several lodges which never have been represented in previous tournaments will take part this year and lodges which always have been represented are showing considerable more interest than usual. Appleton's central location and goodfellowship have been cited as reasons for the unprecedented interest.

Extend Dates
Reports from 22 of the 37 Elks lodges in the state definitely promise 205 teams with a possibility of 20 additional quints from these units, according to L. B. Powers, secretary of the state bowling committee. The remaining 14 lodges, on the basis of previous tourneys, should send 50 teams.

Appleton, which has 165 members who bowl each week in one of the Elks leagues, is figuring on 75 teams.

Although the club has 10 alleys and can accommodate a large number of teams each weekend, it has become necessary to extend the tournament one week.

Jimmy Wilson, New Red Coach, Willing To Don Mask, Milt Bradenton, Fla.—(7)—Jimmy Wilson said today he'd leave the coaching box and don mask and mitt again if his new team, Cincinnati, needs him.

Striding into the clubhouse after his first game of the winter season, the former manager of Philadelphia's National league club was anxious to talk baseball.

"I'm tickled to death with my new place," he declared, "but any job would be better than managing the Phils."

Jimmy was one of the best catchers in the league until he gave up active service and tried from the bench to pry Philadelphia out of the cellar.

The Phils had one of their poorer seasons last year and Wilson started looking around for greener pastures. Manager Bill McKechnie offered him a job as coach with the Reds and he decided to try the new task.

Oshkosh Iceboat Wins Second Series Heat
Detroit—(7)—The series for the Stuart cup, including award, was prolonged yesterday when the Debutante 3d of Oshkosh, Wis., piloted by Johnny Buckstaff, defeated Joe Lodge and his Deuce 3d of Detroit on Lake St. Clair.

Buckstaff lost the second heat but negotiated the 20 miles in 58 minutes 24 seconds to best Lodge by a minute and six seconds later. Lodge won the earlier heat in 56 minutes 48 seconds.

Lawrence Athletes Have Busy Schedules; Cagers at Carroll

BUSY days loom for Lawrence college athletes with basketball, wrestling and swimming competition in full swing and golf, track and tennis in the not too distant future.

The cagers will travel to Waukegan this evening in hopes of avenging a previous 36 to 33 defeat authored by Carroll college earlier in the season. Johnny Green's quint is highly favored to cop but the Vikings showed plenty of potential power in checking Cornell during the first half of a Midwest conference game here Friday and may upset the Pioneers.

Coach A. C. Denney is expected to start Cape and Schuess in forward berths, Masterson at center and Faldie and Buesing in guard posts. The Carroll lineup will show Maahs and Knoblauch at forwards, lanky Johnny Pauler at center and Ken Binder and Narty Biersach in the back court.

Beloit Here
Beloit will invade Alexander gymnasium for a Midwest conference tilt Saturday night while the Blue and White will go to Ripon Feb. 23 and entertain the Redmen March 3.

Wrestlers will tangle with Beloit Saturday afternoon and meet the University of Wisconsin B squad here Feb. 28. The team was scheduled to go to Madison last Saturday but the event was postponed.

The Midwest conference wrestling meet will be held at the Alexander gym March 11.

Coach Ade Dillon and 10 members of the Lawrence swimming team left for Milwaukee today for a meet with the Milwaukee State Teachers team at 7 o'clock tonight. Those competing for Lawrence will be Jack Brand, Ray Chadwick, Ed Hahn, Miles Hance, Peter Humlocker, Tom Gettelman, Robert Anderson, George Fiske, Robert Pedall and John Prescott.

Lawrence tankers will meet Beloit swimmers Saturday afternoon here and the Milwaukee State Teachers team will come to Appleton Feb. 25. The conference meet is scheduled March 11.

Golf, track and tennis teams are scheduled as follows: April 23, Carroll; there; May 6, Ripon; there; May 13, Beloit; here; May 20, conference Cedar Rapids; May 27, state college, Ripon.

Leighton Snares Ice Speed Honors

Delbert Lamb, Milwaukee, Finishes Second At Lake Placid

Lake Placid, N. Y.—(7)—Charles Leighton of Minneapolis is rapidly becoming one of America's top-ranking speed skating stars.

Added to the races that won him a place on the 1940 Olympic team, Leighton won the North American senior men's championship yesterday.

Leighton piled up a total of 110 points to capture the three-day meet and dethrone Vic Ronchetti of Chicago who finished in a tie for third place with Kenny Batholomew of Minneapolis and Eddie Schroeder of Chicago.

Finishing second behind Leighton was Delbert Lamb of Milwaukee, another Olympic team member who was tied for the lead at the start of the final day's events. Lamb scored a total of 80 points.

The mid-west acquired the two top championships in the meet when Maddy Horn of Beaver Dam, Wis., the national women's title holder, captured the women's senior crown with a 130 point total.

Scott Armstrong made 14 Jewell Young, Indianapolis ace, made only three points, on free throws.

St. Mary Takes Lead With 32-16 Win Over St. Norbert

BY RANDY HAASE
MENASHA—St. Mary High school cagers took the lead in the Fox Valley Catholic conference race Monday night when they defeated the St. Norbert College High team, 32 to 16, in a bruising encounter at St. Mary gymnasium. The Zephyrs have won six and lost one while the St. John of Little Chute team, in second place, has won five and lost one.

The St. Norbert team played a rough style of game, charging in on the Zephyrs and carrying them at all times. Thirty-one fouls were called with 17 on the Green Knights. William Resch started on an individual scoring rampage in the final quarter to turn the game into a rout. He accounted for seven field goals and a free throw for 15 points while Gene Laux tossed in four baskets and a free throw for nine points.

Laux set the Zephyrs off with a goal on his first shot, Coenen picked up a free throw and Resch sank a basket. The St. Norbert team rallied to tie the score at 5-all but Resch came through with another goal to put the Zephyrs ahead 7 to 5 at the end of the first quarter.

St. Mary Increases Lead
Prunuske and Hartman matched free throws to make the score 8 to 6 but in the second quarter from that point the St. Norbert team fell steadily behind. The Green Knights had a chance to take the lead during the first half from a free throw line but made only 4 of 17 shots during the ball game.

Most of the second quarter was spent in going from one free throw line to the other with both teams missing numerous shot. J. Collins tipped in a rebound to make the score 11 to 8 but Prunuske sank a field goal and the free throw when fouled by Stoeman to give the Zephyrs a 14 to 8 advantage.

Laux added a free throw before the half ended.

Four of the first five of the St. Mary team were ailing Monday night and play consequently suffered. Both teams scored five points during the third quarter with the Zephyrs finishing the period with a 20 to 13 lead. Resch and Laux scored field goals while Prunuske counted a free throw. For the Green Knights Hartman and Vandenberg scored free throws and Collins tossed in a gift attempt.

Resch Gets Hot
With the fourth quarter Resch started scoring. He shot from the side of the court he battled in rebounds and he came up from tangles of players under the basket to score. He counted a goal at the opening of the period and Stoeman countered with a free throw. Resch then scored a field goal, free throw and another field goal before Laux interrupted his string with a field goal. Resch came right back with another goal to make the score 31 to 14.

The box score:
St. Mary—22, St. Norbert—16.
G. T. P. Coenen 0, Collins 2, Laux 1, Resch 1, Prunuske 1, Hartman 1, Vandenberg 1, Stoeman 1, Faldie 0, Biersach 0, Hantschel 0, Smith 0, Balliet 0, Voigt 0, Heinemann 0, Rotter 0, Jorgensen 0, J. Vikings protected their lead in the National division of the Older Boys league when they defeated Foulers by a 22 to 13 decision during games at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night. Buckeyes trimmed Mercury by a 26 to 20 count and Lincoln Hi-Y scored a 23 to 28 decision over Badgers.

Foulers went bucketless during the first half and Vikings piled up 14 points. Block paced the winners with eight points.

Playing a zone defense throughout the game, Mercury cagers were defeated mainly by the superior height of the Buckeyes. Buckeyes held a narrow lead from the start. Scoring was led by Gerisch of the Buckeyes and Bartmann of the Mercury quint with 10 points apiece.

The Lincoln boys outplayed their rivals until the fourth quarter when the Badgers staged a dangerous rally. Heid and Pegal led the scoring for Lincoln while Koehn and Forster sparked the losers.

CRUCIED TENSE STANCE RESTRICTS BACKSWING ARC.

DON'T CROUCH

It is not always easy for the inexperienced golfer to heed and follow the advice: take a wide, free back stroke. To some of them, it is like embarking on an uncharted seas for they have no idea where the voyage might bring them. To them the safest procedure is one in which the body moves but little and the arms and hands lift the club directly up from the ball in the hope that the downswing will follow a similar pattern. They even prefer to stand crouched and tense over the sphere so that as few errors as possible can creep into the brief swinging arc.

Naturally sooner or later a player will have to be divorced from such a form if he is to attain a creditable game. The sooner the better. In fact if the beginning golfer would only realize that it takes time to start the game right he would be in a better frame of mind to entertain proper fundamentals instead of aiming to knock his head off the ball. Stand up on the ball in a balanced, relaxed manner, with the arms hanging naturally down from the shoulders, body tilted slightly forward at the waist. Then with feet pointed slightly outward, start turning the left hip to the right and pushing the clubhead with the left arm. From such a start you can go to greater things and these include, swinging arc and distance. (Copyright, 1938)

Chaff Chatter

Appleton Post-Crescent

Dear Mac,
Thought sure you'd be back on the job by this time but understand you're having more down than up.

Floyd Bricknell, who kicked in with a boat for the fisherman's party last year, was up the other day and asked me to forward his condolences. He's looking forward to taking part in the party again this year.

Talking about boats reminds me of some new nautical equipment expected to find favor during the 1939 season. It's probably a little early yet but boat owners can be thinking about some of these things. There's a new outboard motor that weighs nine pounds and will push a canoe along at 5 miles an hour. Not bad for those portages, eh? A motor silencer has been introduced which just about eliminates all the noise a motor makes. Maybe that's the solution to Menasha's problem of noise on the river.

Radio telephones now can be installed on launches. Previously phones were available only to yachts. Life preservers are colored orange. It seems that orange is five times more visible than any other color at sea.

Taking my daily peek at your mail I found some interesting things but, sad to say, not one single valentine. The first letter contained a letter which is immediately below.

Yours truly,
Dick Davis.

The Track Captain
Lawrence College
Appleton, Wisconsin

Dear Sir:
I would very much like to correspond with runners on your squad. I am a half-miler in one of the large clubs out here and would be glad to exchange views, etc.

Hoping you will help me out,
Yours sincerely,
Starr Pisani.

(Editor's note: Several of the Lawrence trackmen intend to write Mr. Pisani.)

Dear Sir,
I am a constant reader of your sport sheet, especially boxing articles. The boxers are always given a nice writeup for their work but there is seldom a word of praise given to the man responsible for their success, and that man is their trainer.

I have watched our own Tom Cahoe, trainer at the Y.M.C.A., heard him talk and watched him handle his boys at the fights. I would like to say I have never seen a fellow more shrewd or use better judgment.

I have been in gyms from New York to Green Bay and I can say that I have never met a trainer that takes the welfare of his boys to heart like Tom does.

A man of his character is a great asset to the city as well as to the boys he handles.
A Real Lover of Clean Boxing.

Kimberly, Wis.

Dear Mac,
Just because you made your last public appearance at Kimberly before taking sick, I hope you won't hold that against us. We take no responsibility for your illness and hope you recover soon, especially with the Kimberly A. A. Little Chute A. A. series and the rubber game between St. John High of Little Chute and Kimberly High coming up.

As far as we are concerned, the affairs are a mere formality but the folks at Little Chute don't seem to agree.

I intend to be writing about Kimberly's tenth straight win in the Little Nine conference after the game at Denmark Friday night.

Yours truly,
Ray Mauthe.

BY-GAYLE TALBOT
MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—(4)—The most amazing thing I've run into on this trip is the tremendous popularity of Tony Galento. If one person has asked me "Can that bum really fight?" there have been a hundred.

It amazed me particularly because around New York we had about decided that the country as a whole was fed up on reading about the East Orange, N. J., fat boy. The series of odorous fights he had engaged in this winter, climaxed by the Natie Brown affair in Detroit, had caused us to decide on a virtual Galento moratorium until Tony fought a real fighter.

But it's no use. Through six or seven states the conversation almost invariably has come around to this: "So, you've seen this Tony Galento fight?" Can he fight, or is he just a joke, like some of the fellows make out? Has he got a chance of whipping Joe Louis?

Doesn't Know
I'll be doggone if I know how good a fighter Galento is. Tony is a good friend of mine. In fact, we were out on the beach together today arguing about whether he has a chance of beating Joe Louis.

I told him about the number of persons who were interested in his fighting ability. That didn't surprise him. I asked him for once to get serious and not give me that same line about I'll knock out dat bum.

"All right," he consented. "I'll tell you serious. I can take anything Joe Louis can hit me in that stomach. I got muscles in that stomach from when I was an ice-man and I used to go running up two flights of steps with two 50-pound chunks of ice held up in my arms. Louis can't hurt me there. All I can say about him knockin' me out is that I never been knocked off my feet yet, much less knocked out."

"Now, you tell me whether Joe Louis can take this left of mine when I sink it in his belly like this." I say Louis is afraid of me, and I'll knock him out if he give me that fight next June."

That's Tony's fairly serious answer. Queried next for an "honest answer," Tony's manager, Joe Jacobs declared:

"I still say Louis can't take it." Jacobs claims he saw a look of abject fear in Louis' eyes the night Max Schmeling hammered the present champ to the canvas.

And I think maybe he is sincere in believing that Galento can win the title if given the chance.

Does that clear up the Galento situation at all? Probably not. This much I'll say for sure, Fat Tony really can fight. He doesn't need to be fed has-beens.

Seabiscuit Will Make Debut at Santa Anita

Los Angeles.—(4)—Seabiscuit, reigning king of the turf and winter book favorite in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, which he lost twice by a nose, headed a three-horse field nominated for a $2,000 handicap today at one mile. Various other candidates for the Santa Anita, the country's richest horse race, were scheduled to see action in another event at a mile and one-sixteenth.

A sloppy track twice has delayed Seabiscuit's 1939 debut at Santa Anita. With fair weather promised, the strip today was expected to be fast. No rain has fallen for almost a week.

Pirate Boss Not Losing Any Sleep Over 7 Holdouts

Benswanger 'Pooh-Poohs' Talk of Contract Difficulties

PITTSBURGH.—(4)—Bill Benswanger, head man of the Pittsburgh Pirates, "pooh-poohed" today talk that the failure of seven players to sign 1939 contracts meant holdout trouble.

Sixteen members of the Pirate team that collapsed in the closing days of the 1938 National pennant league chase to give the Cubs the championship have signed, but Benswanger still has to enlist, among others, the "poison twins," outfielders Paul and Lloyd Waner.

Captain Gus Suhr, who holds down first base, utility infielder Bill Brubaker and pitchers Jim Tobin, Eddie Brandt and Bill Swift also have not accepted Pirate terms.

Deadline Near
The deadline for signing contracts is Wednesday, "but it doesn't mean a thing," Benswanger said, adding the failure to sign was "routine," a seasonal haggling over terms that "are ironed out after negotiations."

Furthermore, the Buccaneers are going to be on the night up there in the 1939 pennant race, he said.

Paul "Big Posson" Waner, once the highest paid of the Pirates, and who regularly balks at signing, was reported to have been asked to take a salary cut because of an indifferent 1938 season.

But Manager Pie Traynor refused to worry about Paul, saying he could plug Heinie Manush or Fern Bell into Waner's rightfield spot. Traynor said, however, he would visit Suhr and Brubaker to talk salary terms.

A Short History of China

VII—More About Kublai Khan
Let us look at the empire of Kublai Khan as it existed in the year 1280. At that time he had power from the China sea to the border of Poland, from Siberia to Arabia.

Other Mongol princes had direct charge of the lands in Europe and southwestern Asia, but they admitted that the "grand khan" was their ruler. Kublai's empire covered something like 15,000,000 square miles. It was the largest empire which ever had been put together. The ancient Roman empire could have been placed in one of its corners.

Many empire-builders follow this rule. "The more we get, the more we want." It was so with Kublai. Soon after making his power firm in southern China, he stretched out to conquer Japan.

A mighty fleet was sent to Japan, a fleet which carried about 100,000 fighting men. The journey was a failure. A terrible storm struck the sailing vessels before they reached Japan, and destroyed most of them. We are told that no more than 20,000 of Kublai's men got back safely to the coast of Korea, a section of the empire of Kublai Khan.

Several years before that event took place, a young man from Venice reached Kublai's court. He had come with his father and uncle, two great travelers who had been in China before.

Marco Polo was then 20 years of age. He stayed in China for 18 years, and during all that time was treated with favor by Kublai Khan.

Kublai was much interested in what Marco had to tell him about the customs in Europe. On his part, the young Venetian was filled with wonder by what he saw in the khan's empire.

One thing Marco noticed was the use of paper money. In Europe he had not observed any such custom; the people in Venice employed metal money but not paper.

Kublai Khan died in 1294, two years after the Polos had set out on their return trip to Europe. He was about 78 years of age at the time of his death.

The Mongol lords who followed Kublai were not such skillful rulers. The Chinese formed secret societies, and made plots to drive them from power.

Sixty-one years after Kublai's death, a revolt broke out against the Mongols. It was led by the son of a common laborer.

The revolution dragged on for years, and at last was successful. The workman's son was placed on the throne. He was the first of a line of 16 emperors who belonged to what was called the House of Ming.

Thus the Mongol power crumbled. With weapons of war, the Mongols had made themselves masters of China, but in less than a century they were driven out of the country.

Stacy Must Rely on Reserves to Win Conference Contest

New London—An impatient New London five will tackle West DePere High school cagers in a North-eastern Wisconsin conference game at the Washington High school gym here this evening. The game was postponed from last Friday because of weather and road conditions and the Red and White have a trip to the Menasha High school gym scheduled for Friday night.

West is rated the victim on standings and past performances but Coach D. N. Stacy will be playing half of his reserves. Ken Brault is back from a short illness and may see some action while the other veterans, Hammerberg and Meiklejohn, continue inactive.

DePere has lost six conference games and won only two while the Stacymen have won four and lost five, defeating DePere on their own floor earlier in the season in an overtime tilt.

A preliminary between the B squads at 7 o'clock and a between halves exhibition between a picked Junior league team and the high school freshmen will feature the cage program tonight.

Regular women's volleyball games will be cancelled this evening because of the game.

DANGEROUS SERVICE

By GRACE ELLIOTT TAYLOR

woman. Since Petronella's looking-glass no longer told her discouraging things, she was growing accustomed to the admiration of men. It was a gratifying, but a natural accompaniment to life. Rowdon pulled up a chair for her. Sitting at his desk he looked at, and spoke to Peter.

"I've been thinking about you, since I sent you down to get your sister. I can't do anything for you," he said bluntly. Petronella made no sign, but her heart cried out in sympathy for Peter. She sat facing Rowdon. She did not turn her head to look at her brother. He picked up Peter's typewritten letter and threw it down with a shrug.

"Your articles are rotten," he said. "You were over anxious, you had nothing to write about, and you're not clever enough to be able to write successfully about nothing. That disposes of them. But not of your future, Mr. Peter Mallone. No. I don't believe it does. You told me you were trying to avoid taking a job in Burma. Rangoon, wasn't it? Which may tie you to a rice mill, and a safe job for the rest of your life? Well, it seems to me that under your very nose is the chance of giving it to you here in London. I might be able to, but you'd have to grind for years. But there's a lot of trouble brewing in the East; especially in Burma. And Burma is a country we haven't got covered well—only by a cable service, no first-hand experience stuff. You may be unlucky. The Cooringhis and the Burmans may have stopped arguing about the division of dock labor, by the time you get there. And the mad visionary, who calls himself Sava San, may have ceased roaming the jungle stirring up rebellion against the British. Then you may have to—well, mill your rice! But if I'm right, as I think I am, in believing there's a lot more to come, then you're being paid by somebody else to go where there is real news. If you care to, you can send me some stories. If they're any good, I'll cut three-quarters of them, and publish them. It depends on the way things go, and upon yourself. You say you have a flair for getting news. I'm giving you the chance of proving it. Selfishly, I admit, Rowdon glanced, in apology, at Petronella. "But I'm pretty busy, and no philanthropist. I haven't time to nurse raw young journalists." He stood up.

Peter sprang to his feet, hastily. Petronella took the big, out-thrust hand. She thanked him.

"I'm sure you're right. He ought to go. We haven't taken interest in the country. Father mentions the trouble in his letters, but it always sounds rather a muddle."

"What does your father do in Burma?"

"He's in the Military Police," answered Peter. "He's just been made a Colonel."

"That might help, too," Petronella suggested. "From now on, we'll specialize."

"Goodby—Good Luck!"

Rowdon's eyebrows went up in amusement. "We?" he queried. "Your sister might not make such a bad newspaper woman as she seems to think!"

Peter shook hands with him. "Thank you very much, sir. I'll make the most of the opportunity. If it turns up, You haven't seen the last of me!"

"I hope I haven't. Mallone. Sorry I must turn you out now. Goodby, and good luck! To both of you," Rowdon added, smiling at Petronella. "I think Burma is going to be lucky!"

She laughed at his gallantry. She liked Martin Rowdon. She hoped that they would meet again.

"You're not by any chance partly Irish, too? You say such very nice things to me."

"Certainly not. English—Scotch. A truthful mixture. So you're Irish? That's where you get those large gray eyes!"

"No, they're Russian," smiled Petronella. "We had a Russian grandfather."

He asked Peter quickly. "You speak Russian?" and having heard his answer, promised "I'll remember that."

But outside, once more, on the pavement of the street of adventure, Peter turned to her. His elation was gone. His eyes were doubtful.

"Do you think he meant a word of it?" he asked sharply. "Was it just his idea of a kind way of getting rid of me, and reconciling me to a steady job?"

Petronella also felt less sure. But she was not entirely despairing. She hesitated.

"I don't know. But I don't think so. He isn't the sort of man to waste time softening blows for people. He's had too many himself. And believes they did him good. I'm terrified of misleading you, but I think he really meant it. If things go the right way for you, it will be an opportunity. Peter, we can only wait and see!"

James Randall drove them down to Folkestone. His family had lent their large car. Aunt Maisie came with them, too.

Petronella looked white and tired. Excitement over the trip to Burma seemed suddenly to have left her. Blackly, she was facing the reality of this parting, to which, during the last few months she had secretly begun to look forward with increasing delight. She would be gone for two, or three years, she supposed.

A great deal was bound to happen in that time. This might mean the final split between herself and James. She knew that he hated to say goodbye to her. He was fond of her. She was too young, he had told him, to know how she felt about him. Only just seventeen. He, like Aunt Maisie, seemed to be angry about that.

James resented father's summarily sending for her. Even though she had changed her mind, and wanted to go. But when she came back, he had intimated, he might still be waiting for her. But Petronella believed differently. James was a companionable young man. Girls thought him very good looking, and charming. He would earn more money than most young men, as soon as he left Cambridge. Mr. Randall would put him on to all the best things on the Stock Exchange. He would soon forget all about her. Petronella was not sure that she wanted him to forget.

There was also Aunt Maisie to be considered. She was going to be horribly lonely. Auntie was looking very old tonight. She might be ill. She might even die. At that thought, Petronella stared at her. She was only just realizing how valuable Aunt Maisie was to them. She was part of their life. She was their only secure, real background—and now they were leaving her, perhaps forever.
